Storm Leaves 20-Million Damage in Florida, Heads North

Hurricane Moving on Carolina Coast Area

2 Dead in Miami; Communications Break Hides Extent Of Ruin in Cuba

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 19 (AP).—A tropical storm passed over Florida today to the Atlantic Coast and headed toward Cape Hatteras, N. C., after causing two deaths in Miami and damage to the citrus crop estimated at 20 million dollars.

At Miami the Coast Guard broadcast a warning to all mariners that a ship had sunk and blocked the entrance to Havana Harbor and that no vessels could get in or out of the Cuban port.

Communications to western Cuba where the storm struck its heaviest blow yesterday remained disrupted. Incomplete reports confirmed seven deaths. The injured were estimated at from 300 to 400.

6 Vessels Driven Aground

At Key West, Fla., six naval vessels were driven aground but none was seriously damaged and there were no casualties. A Navy tug which removed 21 men from an abandoned lightship reestablished radio communication today and reported all aboard were safe.

The Miami dead included an unidentified enlisted seaman, killed when his motorcycle crashed into the main gate of the Miami naval station before dawn today.

Earlier a night watchman was electrocuted when a 23,000-volt power line fell on him.

Winds of 60 to 70 miles an hour accompanied the storm's passage over Jacksonville. Windows were broken and trees uprooted. Shipyard workers were permitted to leave their jobs before the storm struck. Schools also were dismissed.

Causes High Tides

High tides were caused along the coast and winds in some places reached 100 miles an hour. The storm was accompanied by heavy rains.

Hurricane warnings were posted as far north as the Virginia Capes. The Weather Bureau predicted gales, hurricane winds and heavy rains for the Georgia and Carolina coast.

Miami newspapers and radio stations were without news service today after 12:45 p. m. when the wires connecting Miami with the rest of the country were knocked out by the storm.

Telephone calls were being accepted with several hours delay. Western Union was accepting messages but with no promise when they would be delivered.

The sun shone in Miami late this afternoon and there was a gentle breeze.

Evacuation Advised

At Atlanta, Regional Red Cross Director John C. Wilson advised evacuation from Hatteras to Kitty Hawk and Manteo, an area just recovering from a September 14 hurricane. He said heavy waves were expected in that area.

From eight to 15 Red Cross workers have been in the Hatteras area, headquarters at Avon, N. C., for the past month and they were ordered to remain on duty during the present emergency. Army water distillers, which were to

Patron Refused Butter Declines To Grease Palm

"No butter, sir," the Child's waitress yesterday told her gentleman customer as she had been instructed to tell each person before he ordered.

"Why not," he answered, flushing a bit at the inconvenience.

"There's a butter shortage, points have gone up and restaurants have agreed to serve no butter with lunches."

The portly diner asked for substitutes. None suited him and he griped throughout his meal.

When it was over, the waitress came up to his table and presented a check.

The man was hot with anger. "No butter, no tip," he screamed.

"Well, that's all right, sir," the patient blonde waitress answered, "but I'm not to blame for your not having any butter."

'Factual' Reply Given Dewey on Foreign Policy

State Department Defends Signing of Romanian Armistice

By Robert C. Albright

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's attack on the President's conduct of foreign policy yesterday was ignored by the White House, but the State Department issued a "factual" rebuttal of some of the charges while Capitol Democrats slammed back at the Governor.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) accused Dewey of a "radical, intemperate and unjustifiable attack on the foreign policy of this country as conducted by the President . . . (He) recklessly demands what amounts to an open break with Russia while the war is still on."

Roosevelt Preparing Next Talk

The President merely went to work on his foreign policy speech in New York Saturday night, which many think will reply more explicity to the Governor.

Presidential Secretary Stephen Early referred reports to the State Department, which issued the third of the Administration's series of "factual analyses" of Dewey's speeches.

This was confined to the Governor's charge that the armistice with Romania fixing future frontiers of that country and disposing of Bessarabia and Transylvania, "was signed by a representative of Soviet Russia acting in behalf of the United States."

The State Department said this Government participated "at all stages" in the armistice agreement with Romania:

"Precisely because it was a military document and not a peace settlement it was presented by Marshal Malinovski the theater commander, duly authorized by the Government of the United States, the U. S. S. R. and the United Kingdom.

Follows Pattern for Italy

"This action by Marshal Malinovski followed directly the pattern of General Eisenhower in signing the armistice with Italy on behalf of the United States, the United Kingdom and the U. S. S. R.

Congressman H. P. Fulmer Dies at Home

Representative Hampton P. Fulmer, 69, dean of the House delegation from South Carolina and Democratic chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, died unexpectedly late yesterday of a heart attack at his apartment, 118 Maryland ave. ne.

Mr. Fulmer, who maintained his home in Orangeburg, S. C., had been a member of Congress since March 4, 1921. Only 17 present members of the House had served longer.

He had just reached his apartment from his office when he stumbled while leaving the elevator. The operator helped him into the apartment and within a few minutes the Congressman died. He had been in declining health for several months and last winter took an extended rest in Florida upon his doctor's advice.

Born in Springfield, S. C.

Mr. Fulmer was born June 23, 1875, near Springfield, S. C., and was educated in the county public schools and Springfield High School. He was graduated from Massay's Business College, Columbus, Ga., in 1897, and married Miss Willa E. Lybrand of Wagener, Aiken County, S. C., in 1901. They had three children, Mrs. Charles Gordon Smith and Mrs. William T. Reed, both of New York, and Mrs. John Benson Sloan of South Carolina. He is survived by his widow and his three children.

Besides his chairmanship of the Agricultural Committee, Mr. Fulmer was also a member of the Committee on Conservation of Wildlife Resources. He was author of the United States Cotton Grading Act, passed by the Sixty-seventh Congress, under which the grading of cotton was standardized.

Drafted Veterans Bill

He also framed the $1,300,000,000 United States Veterans' Hospital Bill and was perhaps best known as the author of the Agricultural Adjustment Act passed in th early days of the Roosevelt Administration.

His death further cuts Democratic ranks in the House to 214, a slim margin over the Republicans' strength of 212. In case of a Republican victory in the House this fall Representative Clifford R.

War Fund Hits $829,238 in 2-Day Drive

Gifts From 82,715 Persons Equal 17.1% Of $4,800,000 Goal

Two days of campaigning were worth $829,238 to the Community Chest fund, 200 workers learned yesterday in the first report luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce Building, 1615 H st. nw.

Total collections up to noon meant that the drive for $4,800,000 in the District thus had reached 17.10 per cent of its goal, with contributions from 82,715 persons.

The Government unit, faced with the assignment of producing exactly half of the entire city's quota, turned up with 19.25 per cent of its own $2,400,000 goal as keymen from the various Federal agencies reported collections of $462,863 from 79,822 donors.

Many smaller departments handed in receipts over 100 per cent—the Fine Arts Commission, the American Battle Monuments Commission, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the Library of Congress and the Federal Reserve Board. Two of the major agencies, Labor and Agriculture, were able to announce surprisingly large percentages of their individual quotas—69 per cent for Labor, 40 for Agriculture.

The business unit announced

Pickin's Bad for Pants Prowler, Gets but $101 in 5 Attempts

Washington's pants burglar struck five times within a radius of three blocks in the Northwest section of the District yesterday, but got only $101 from the billfolds of two sleeping residents to add to the more than $11,000 he has stolen in the past four months.

Maj. Edward J. Kelly, Superintendent of Police, pointed out that apprehension of the silent prowler, who has become the biggest "headache" in many months for police, is difficult because the thief works only at night and selects homes that are surrounded by shrubbery. "We are doing eevrything we can to catch the man," he said yesterday, "and if necessary we will detail more men to patrol in cars and on foot during the night. But we will get him."

Yesterday's victims were Leonard Abrams of 4330 46th st. nw., and George Daidy of 4445 Warren st. nw. Abrams told police entrance was gained to his home through an unlocked window on the first floor. The thief took Abrams' pants from the second-floor bedroom to the dining room, where he left them after removing $94, police said.

Yanks Drive For Key to Rhineland

British Plough Deeper Into Maas River Bridgehead; Nazis Falling Back

London, Oct. 19 (AP).—British troops advancing southward from captured Venray plowed 3½ miles deeper into the German Maas River bridgehead in Holland today and a strong American force converged upon the key town of Amerika astride one of the main railroads leading eastward into Germany's industrial northern Rhineland.

The Germans, given no respite after their costly defeat at Venray and faced with possible entrapment on the Maas' west bank, began hastily retreating from strong positions northeast of Venray, and to the south and southwest fell back before powerful American and British drives. It was the eighth day of an Allied offensive to eliminate the German Maas salient and prepare the ground for a big smash into the northern Siegfried Line.

Yanks Roll Across Canal

The British drove to points approximately three miles north of Amerika, while American forces pushing steadily eastward from the Deurne area continued to roll across the Deurne Canal and stood about the same distance west of the town.

Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' American First Army in hand-to-hand and house-to-house fighting through Aachen won control of more than half of the city, finding German resistance as stubborn and strong as it was on the first day of the siege of the big German center, 11 days ago.

At the Channel end of the western front, Canadian troops advanced northward to within a mile of the key German port of Breskens on the south bank of the Schelde Estuary and also closed in on the town from the east, reaching a unnamed bay, two miles away.

(The Canadians actually are inside Breskens, the British radio said today, quoting correspondents at supreme Allied headquarters.)

Third Army Bogged

The rest of the front was relatively static on a day of continued bad weather, worst toward the south; Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's American Third Army in eastern France was bogged in mud, the doughboys lying in many of the same trenches their fathers used in the first World War, while American and French troops in the Vosges foothills further to the south consolidated and improved

Landing in Philippines

Associated Press Wirephoto

REPORTED BY JAPS—Arrows show course of American offensive in the Western Pacific, which the Tokyo radio said yesterday had been climaxed by landings in central Philippines under command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, whose forces south of the Philippines have an advanced base at Morotai. Japanese reported American landings on Suluan Island at the mouth of Leyte Gulf, east of the Island of Leyte. United States Navy task forces, beginning with an attack on Ryukyu Islands October 9, have bombed Formosa and the northern Philippines for more than a week, and were joined in the assault on Formosa by China-based Superfortresses

U. S. Thrust At Island in Leyte Gulf Reported

"Return" Headed By MacArthur and Spruance, Enemy Broadcasts Say

American invasion of the Philippines—almost two and a half years after the fall of Corregidor—was reported by Radio Tokyo Thursday.

Japanese reports said American amphibious forces from fleets commanded by Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Admiral Raymond Spruance, hit the east-central Philippines and apparently landed fighting men on small Suluan Island, in the mouth of Leyte Gulf only 400 airline miles southeast of Manila.

There was no American confirmation of Nippon reports that MacArthur had carried out his declared determination of March 17, 1942, when, upon landing in Australia from the Philippines, he said "I shall return."

Backed by Guns, Planes

The Japanese Domei news agency broadcast that United States forces had begun their "reinvasion of the Philippines" backed by naval guns of the Pacific Fleet and planes flying from bases in China. The China coast is approximately 1000 miles west of Leyte Island.

Domei said the invasion [illegible] the enemy forces seem to have landed on Suluan Island."

A Japanese imperial headquarters communique pictured the enemy fleet" of warships and troop transports as pushing into Leyte Gulf after shore defenses had been blasted with naval shells and aerial bombs for two days. The Japanese said their forces were opposing the invasion.

Domei claimed that U. S. task force 58, the mighty carrier armada of Vice Admiral Marc A. Mitscher that has blasted the Ryukyu Islands, Formosa and the northern Philippines since October 9, was not in the Leyte Gulf action.

"Smashing" Claim Denied

The Japanese previously reported, and brought denial from Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, that force 58 was badly smashed up east of Formosa.

The Nippon agency said the Yank fleet approached the Philippines "from the direction of New Guinea." It added land-based planes from American-held Morotai Island, 400 miles southward, and the Palau Islands, 500 miles eastward, were "participating in the reinvasion operations."

The Tokyo headquarters broadcast said "our navy and army units in close cooperation are at present intercepting this enemy force." Domei said "our army and navy forces in this sector are confronting the enemy forces with undaunted resolution."

Meanwhile, the Japanese-controlled Manila radio reported 270 American carrier planes returned to that area Thursday. It said four waves of planes hit the Manila area and Clark Field, major air depot 40 miles northwest.

In Preparation for Months

American forces have been paving the way for reinvasion of the Philippines for months. While MacArthur was pushing his Army forward on the southern flank, other Yank Army and Navy forces invaded the Marianas and took over Saipan, Tinian and Guam Islands.

Then came the invasion of the Palau Islands, main guardians of the Philippines' eastern flank.

Recently the mighty U. S. Third Fleet warships and carriers knocked at Japan's front door. Waves of carrier planes blasted the Ryukyus, Formosa and the northern Philippines, smashing shipping and airfields. American Superfortress bombers from China added their

101 Fail to Keep Appointments At Blood Center

Despite reported American landings on the Philippine Islands and the possibility of rising casualty reports, 101 Washingtonians yesterday failed to keep their appointments at the District Red Cross Blood Donor Center.

As Radio Tokyo indicated that United States soldiers, sailors and Marines were facing the Japs in the Pacific, rows of empty beds at the center at 51 Louisiana ave. nw. convinced Red Cross officials that apathy toward the war in the Capital has "reached new heights."

Two groups—from Government offices, most important single source of blood donors—canceled their appointments at the last moment, leaving nurses and doctors standing idle. Another group, scheduled for 17, arrived with only three persons.

"We need appointments urgently for Saturday," Director Loretta Bickford said, showing long blank spaces on appointment books. "On that day we take appointments until 11:15 a. m., for the center closes around noon—but apparently many people forget that."

Today's vacancies are between 10:15 a. m. and 1 p. m. Mrs. Bickford also pointed out that her books for Monday also are badly in need of donors, either individually or in groups.

You may make an appointment by calling District 3300.

Reported Death Of Capital Marine Found in Error

Britain to Give De Gaulle Nod To Rule France

London, Oct. 19 (AP).—Great Britain has decided to recognize the regime of Gen. Charles de Gaulle as the provisional government of France, the United Press learned today from excellent sources.

(The Associated Press said the British Foreign Office had termed the report speculative.)

Announcement of recognition is expected to be made simultaneously with an announcement from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower that a large part of France will be turned over to the French administration as a "zone of interior."

British recognition of the De Gaulle government might already have been granted had the United States been ready for simultaneous action, one highly-placed source said.

It was also understood British recognition would be granted virtually free of "strings," except possibly for those dealing with military exigencies of the moment.

The British are said to feel that the time has come to put the administration of France fully in the hands of the De Gaulle govern-

Berlin Reports Big Red Army In East Prussia

London, Oct. 19 (AP).—A massive Red army, poised for two months at the East Prussian frontier, has invaded prewar Germany for the first time, smashing several miles into the Reich fortress and capturing the border town of Eydtkau, 37 miles from strategic Insterburg in a still-rolling offensive, Berlin announced officially tonight.

The Russians were backed by 500 tanks and hundreds of big guns which laid down an overwhelming barrage. They possessed "unheard of numerical superiority," and were supported at both ends of a flaming 200-mile front by two other huge armies attacking on the northern and southern sides of the imperilled Junker homeland, Berlin said.

Reds Claim Fresh Gains

Moscow was silent about the East Prussian front, where the Germans said the Russians had been attacking for three days, but the Soivet radio declared "the war has entered its final stage."

Russians told of fresh gains in Czechoslovakia and Hungary. In five days ending Wednesday the Russians captured more than 11,000 Germans and Hungarians,

Down-to-Earth Story

Storm Gives Pilot 'High-Chair,' Another Plane Robs Cradle

Groton, Conn., Oct. 19 (AP).—A Navy fighter plane glanced off a house rooftop today in a crash landing, tearing the blanket from the bed of a sleeping two-year-old child who escaped with only minor scratches.

State police found the missing blanket in the plane wreckage after the craft smacked into a nearby school. The pilot was injured slightly.

The child, Margaret Morton, was buried in plaster and debris until her father, Thomas, dug her out, frightened but unharmed.

A United States Eighth Air Force Fighter Base, England, Oct. 19 (AP). The Mustang plane of Lieut. Woodrow W. Williams, of Houston, Tex., was torn to pieces in a terrific storm, it was disclosed today. Williams was stunned. He regained consciousness to find that, even though he was still sitting in the cockpit chair, the rest of his plane was gone.

He pulled the ripcord instinctively and floated to earth with bits of his Mustang fluttering around him. He was treated for minor cuts and bruises.

Nazi Puppet's Plea Threatens Hungary

War Sidelights

Crisis Stirs JapSympathy For Filipinos

San Francisco, Oct. 19 (AP).—Radio Tokyo said today Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma, commander of the Japanese forces that landed in the Philippines almost three years ago, sent a message of "heartfelt sympathy" to the Filipino people because "Americans are again trying to invade your country."

The broadcast quoted Homma as saying he invaded the islands because "we were then forced to punish the Americans who poisoned East Asia by establishing headquarters in your land, and now the same Americans are again trying to invade your country, this time not only to fight Japan, but also to do harm against you Filipinos."

(Homma established headquarters in Manila after the fall of Bataan and Corregidor. He went about the islands with a heavy bodyguard and was kept busy in fruitless efforts to pacify the islands and end Filipino guerilla warfare.

(The Philippine underground incorrectly reported Homma killed by guerillas several times. After one year the general was relieved of his command and American prisoners in Manila at that time felt he was pulled off the job because of his failure to solve the guerilla problem.)

Prisoner Fare Envied

Paris, Oct. 19 (U.P.).—The newspaper Franc-Tireur charged today that German prisoners at Bennevilliers were eatinng oranges, pineapple, chocolate and ham under the noses of hungry Parisians who do not benefit from American army rations.

"We suppose the next step will be to put taxis at their disposal," the paper said.

Killed in Ambush

Rome, Oct. 19 (U.P.).—Reports reaching here from the Italian patriot underground in north Italy said today patriots had ambushed and killed Pietro Koch, former head of the Fascist secret police in Rome and one of the most ferocious persecutors of pro-Allied Italians.

Executions Reported

London, Oct. 19 (AP).—The exiled Polish government charged today that the Germans were executing in gas chambers members of the Polish patriot army who surrendered with Lieut. Gen. Tadeusz Komorowski.

Germany had promised to treat the patriots as regular prisoners of war.

Stand By Germany, He Begs, and Warns Of Ruthlessness

London, Oct. 19 (AP).—Premier Ferenc Szalasi, ignoring Adolf Hitler's frank admission that Germany no longer has a single European ally, appealed to Hungarians today for a last-ditch stand against national extermination.

He promised "prosecution of the war at the side of the tri partite powers until final victory."

He pledged nationalization of mines and large industries, and postwar expulsion of Hungary's jews "to a place designated by international agreement."

He coupled this with a threat to carry out ruthless measures against "enemies from inside or outside the country."

Budapest Turbilent

The first Hungarian army, the Paris radio reported, has joined forces with the Russians.

(In Moscow, great disturbances were reported in Budapest. A correspondent of Tass reported wholesale execution of Jews was about to take place, asserting that all Jews had been locked in their homes.

(It was also reported from Moscow that Hungary's fascists had given soldiers who turned against the Germans until noon tomorrow to return to duty, under penalty of death when captured.)

(The United Press said bloody clashes were reported sweeping all Hungary, with a crisis gathering swiftly in Budapest where the Szalasi government, supported by German troops using Tiger tanks in pitched battles with rebellious army units, struggled vainly to get control 96 hours after its putsch.

Resistance Spreads

(Resistance rapidly is spreading, with 10 divisions of the First Hungarian Army, maintaining its allegiance to Admiral Nicholas Horthy, closing in on the strife-torn captial, it was reported from various contentinental listening posts.

(A Moscow broadcast said resistance had reached such dimensions in Budapest that German SS troops were using tanks in the fighting. Moscow added that Edmund Veesenmayer, German Minister to Hungary who helped engineer the plot to overthrow Horthy, had committed suicide, while a United Press Istanbul dispatch said the Nazi Gestapo Chief Auinger had been assassinated in Budapest.)

From Bari, Italy, came varying reports on the fate of Horthy.

One was that he had fled to the mountanis. Another was that the Germans abducted him. Bari reports said strikes virtually had paralyzed Budapest. Street battles, as well, were declared in progress.

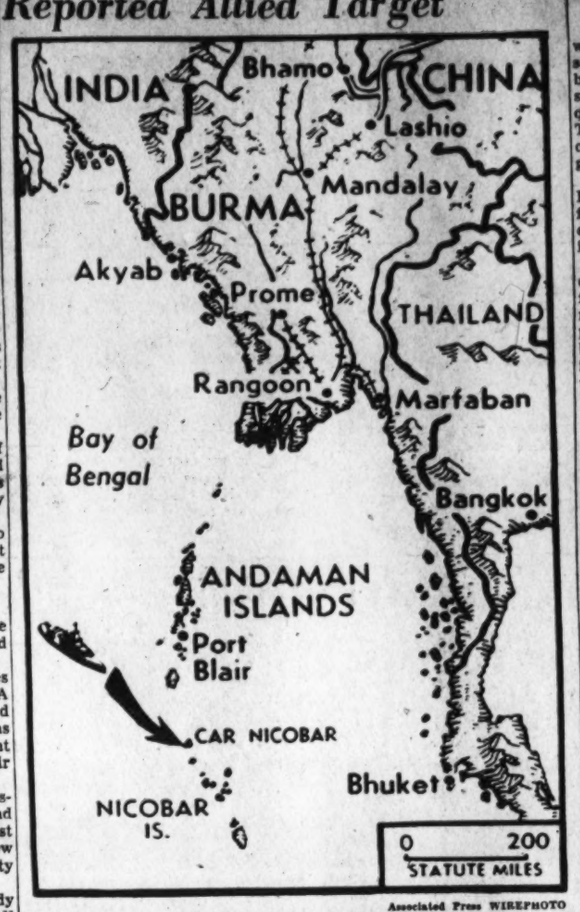

"Traitors Dispensed With"

[illegible] as to Horthy's fate was seen in the broadcast by his longtime enemy and new interior minister, Gabriel Vajna, who said Szalasi's government had finished "dispensing with the traitors."

A great armored battle was reported in the Debrecen area, where the Russians closing in on Eastern Hungary are attempting to trap the retreating German Sixth and Eighth armies.

Hungarian experts at Bari said the chief factor preventing Horthy's attempt to win an armistice last Sunday was that the Nazis apparently had been tipped off and were able to prepare a counter coup.

ment, particularly in view of De Gaulle's bitter speech last Saturday in which he told the French people the must learn to "stand alone" and not rely on their Allies to restore France to her pre-war position as a world power.

Recognition would give the De Gaulle administration an opportunity to show its full capacity for domestic and foreign affairs.

In Paris the entire French press front paged a statement by Brig. Gen. Julius C. Holmes, supreme headquarters spokesman on civil affairs in occupied countries, that the French army will participate in the military government of Germany.

The newspaper combat commented that "this is exactly what we have been demanding. Now that our rights are recognized, our duty begins."

No Comment Here

By the United Press

There was no official comment here last night on reports that Britain will recognize the De Gaulle administration as the provisional government of France, but well informed sources said they would be surprised—even astonished—if the British took such action before the United States is ready to do likewise.

In view of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's address last night charging that President Roosevelt's "persistent refusal" to grant recognition was "contributing to the increasing chaos behind our lines," diplomatic sources said the chances of any change in the American attitude toward France before the election were slight. They doubted that Prime Minister Winston Churchill would do anything at this time that might embarrass President Roosevelt.

WAR

their positions despite German counterattacks.

The focal point of the entire front was the British-American drive against the enemy's Maas salient and particularly against the railroad town of Amerika. Lying 6 miles south of Venray, Amerika is on the railroad from Helmond leading south eastward through the border city of Venlo and on into Germany through Crefeld to the Rhineland. Amerika is just 8 miles northwest of Venlo, an important prize in itself.

Nazis Pulling Out

Northeast of Venray where the Germans had dug in as if for the winter, the determined onslaught of the British Tommies and the Allied success in Venray apparently forced the enemy to change his strategy, for the Nazi troops were pulling out of this sector today.

The British adance southwest of Venray toward Amerika put the Allied troops across a supply road leading to enemy units [illegible] British and American armor in waterlogged marshes near the Deurne Canal. A British staff officer said that as a result German resistance was expected to weaken considerably here.

50 Prisoners Taken

In this sector 650 German prisoners were taken yesterday, raising the total to more than 1500 since the beginning of this offensive October 12.

Capture of Amerika would give the Allies control of a major road and the only railroad leading to Venlo, which has been amde into a German strongpoint. Capture also would necessitate withdrawal of German artillery and troops from set positions which until now have been strong.

The Germans conceded the importance of the Maas action, declaring that Lieut. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey was concentrating additional forces of his British Second Army here, "apparently with the intention of eliminating" the German bridgehead. The Berlin radio said the fighting was increasing in violence, much of it hand to hand.

At Aachen 150 more prisoners were taken as the Americans maintained an unbroken advance despite German opposition from rifles, machineguns, mortars, some artillery and a few tanks.

Northeast of Aachen enemy pressure continued. Today Allied communique said the fighting in the city itself was centered in the northwestern section, while outside Aachen to the northwest American troops destroyed a large number of pillboxes and made gains against strong opposition.

Along the Schelde Estuary the Canadians appeared to be on the verge of liquidating the remaining Germans entrenched in Breskens in their drive to clean up this area and win free use of the big Belgian port of Antwerp, freed but unusable because of German control of the Schelde mouth.

New Line Taking Shape

A new enemy line was taking shape from Breskens south to Schoondijke and west through Oostburg and Sluis, field dispatches said. Canadians tonight were less than a mile from Oostburg, 6 miles southwest of Breskens, after advancing 3 miles in rain.

ROOSEVELT

with regard to the terms themselves, Secretary Hull on September 20, 1944, pointed out in a statement to the press that the question of the final disposition of Transylvania would depend upon confirmation at the tmie of the general peace settlement.

"The settlement with regard to Bessarabia merely restores the frontier between the two states as established by the Soviet-Roumanian agreement of June 8, 1940."

Arrangements meanwhile were completed for Mr. Roosevelt to tour four New York City boroughs tomorrow in his new "personal appearance" campaign for reelection, before addressing the Foreign Policy Association tomorrow night.

Will Attend Wagner Rally

Other developments:

1. A brief Saturday morning speech by the President, at an Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, rally for Senator Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.), campaigning for reelection, was announced at New York headquarters o fthe Senator.

2. White House Secretary Early said the President will speak in Boston, but mentioned no date. (Boston sources say November 4). The President is expected to speak also in Chicago and Cleveland, but has confirmed only one other speech, at Shibe Park, Philadelphia, October 27.

3. Former Democratic Senator William H. Smathers of New Jersey reopened the White House doorstep debate over where New Jersey's 16 electoral ballots will go. Smathers' forecast: "Roosevelt will carry New Jersey by at least 150,000 votes." Former Gov. Charles Edison at the White House on Tuesday predicted a "substantial" Jersey margin for Dewey. Smathers charged "the former governor's judgment has been warped ever since he started an intra-party fight with Mayor Frank Hague."

Almost overshadowed by Dewey's Wednesday night attack was the fact that the New York Governor had answered affirmatively two of the three questions propounded by Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.), as a foreign policy test for both candidates.

Dewey not only favored establishment of a world organization for peace before the end of hostilities, but declared against reservations that would nullify its power to prevent future aggression.

Neither Roosevelt nor Dewey has yet answered Ball's third querry: Do they favor power for the United States delegate to the Security council to commit United States forces to help put down aggression.

Ball Refuses to Comment

Ball declined comment on the Dewey speech.

Not so, Democratic Senator O'Mahoney, who said the first part of Dewey's speech contained the same type of "extreme and irreconcilable criticism which he condemned in the second part."

Strong Winds Expected

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—Strong northeast onshore winds of better than 40-miles-per-hour velocity are expected to hit Maryland's Eastern Shore tomorrow, but the Baltimore Weather Bureau said today it did not expect any "flooding tide."

Meteorologist Joseph H. Bily of the Baltimore Bureau said the tides would be higher than normal but they were not expected to equal those experienced at Ocean City in the Septemebr hurricane.

Norfolk Area May Escape

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—Norfolk was placed on the alert this afternoon, and F. B. Whitney, in charge of the Norfolk Weather Bureau, said his plotting of the hurricane showed a go dochance that it might pass sufficienlty far out at sea to keep this area from being affected other than by brisk winds and heavy rain.

Plan Relief Expedition

Havana, Oct. 19 (AP).—U. S. authorities today began planning a relief expedition which would provide food for western Cuba, where the population faced serious shortages in the wake of a hurricane.

The storm destroyed $500,000 worth of food imported from the United States. The U. S. embassy estimated the food loss, in stores, warehouses and fields, exceeded three million dollars.

All U. S. residents in Havana were reported safe and uninjured. There was no information from the Isle of Pines, where many Americans have had residences.

RUSSIA

900 of them southeast of embattled Belgrade, Yugoslav capital.

Belgrade itself was on the verge of capture as the Russians and Marshal Tito's partisans pressed the savagely resisting enemy back into a small part of the city.

Led by the brilliant 37-year-old Jewish tank expert, Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky, troops of the Third White Russian Army swept over Edytkau, a half-mile across the Lithuanian border on the Kaunas-Konigsberg highway crashing through some of the toughest fortifications in the east in a steady drive toward Konigsberg, East Prussian capital 110 miles beyond in the lake-dotted and forested province.

It was the first time in 30 years that Russian troops had invaded Germany. In 1914 Czarist armies entered East Prussia along the same Kaunas-Konigsberg highway and also in the south in the Masurian Lake area. The famous Battle of Tannenberg followed, and the Russians were crushed and routed by Von Hindenburg.

Part of Pincers

Berlin said Cherniakhovsky's blow from the east was only part of a gigantic Soviet pincers against East Prussia, launched by three armies bolstered by tremendous reserves moved up from the conquered Finnish and Estonian fronts.

On the north, Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian's First Baltic Army struck along the frontier of German-annexed Memel territory, and on the south Gen. G. F. Zakhorov's Second White Russian Army lashed out on a 65-mile front above Warsaw, beyond the Narew River in northern Poland between Serock and Nowograd.

Nowograd is only 15 miles from the Nazi frontier and Berlin said Zakharov's eventual objective was Danzig, where some of the first shots of the war were fired. Danzig lies 150 airline miles to the northwest and its seizure would lop off East Prussia.

Hope of Kansas would assume the chairmanship of the Agriculture Committee. Otherwise, Fulmer will be succeeded by Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., of Virginia.

Funeral arrangements for the veteran lawmaker were incomplete following his death last night, but the body will probably be returned to Fulmer's South Carolina home for burial.

Fairfax County, lone member of the outlying area groups scheduled to report, turned in $5588 from 53 contributors, for 14 per cent of its goal.

Guest speaker was Mrs. James Bines, member of the Medical Auxiliary Corps of the British Red Cros sin the Far Eeast, who was the last white woman to leave Singapore before it fell to the Japs.

Mrs. Bimes, whose husband has been in a Japanese concentration camp for 2½ years, described the dying agonies of hundreds of women and children who were victims of Jap bombing raids in Malaya and Sinngapore.

"You have so much," she told war fund solicitors who crowded the Hall of Flags to hear her speak. "You have comfort and safety—and you're not even grateful. You've had it; you think you always will. I hope that you never have to hear the screams of the wounded begging for help, or to be put out of their agony."

Two other entries and an attempted entry into homes in the same vicinity early yesterday were reported to police.

Henry S. Goodman of 4507 Verplanck pl. nw., reported that he and his wife were awakened about 4 a. m. by a noise on the first floor. When he went downstairs to investigate, Goodman told police, he saw someone running through the alley. He could give no description of the intruder, police said. A back window of the Goodman home had been pried open.

When Richard Scholz of 4708 Yuma st. nw., awoke yesterday morning he found his trousers downstairs, police said. There had been no money in the pockets, however, and the thief disturbed nothing else in the house, Scholz reported.

Paper Probe 'Smear,' Says Mrs. O'Daniel

By Mary Spargo

Bursting into tears as she spoke of her two sons in the armed forces, Mrs. W. Lee O'Daniel, wife of the junior Senator from Texas, yesterday accused a Senate committee of trying to "smear" them, in an investigation of the anti-New Deal paper they own.

Mrs. O'Daniel made her charge as she appeared at her own request before the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, headed by Senator Theodore Francis Green (D., R. I.), which has been investigating the W. Lee O'Daniel News, a weekly publication which she testified she manages for her sons.

"Prompting" Is Charged

The Senator did not testify, but he sat beside his wife and held her hand, occasionally whispering to her.

The whispering provoked a sharp interchange between him and Senator James M. Tunnel (D., Del.).

Snapped O'Daniel:

"If you want to remove the Senator from Texas from the side of his wife, you may try."

Tunnell pressed the point, but the chairman ignored the entire exchange.

Mrs. O'Daniel told the committee that approximately 70,000 copies of the "W. Lee O'Daniel News" and printed weekly in Fort Worth, Tex., and that she edited the paper from Washington.

The paper usually carries the slogan, "What America needs most is a thorough housecleaning in Washington," and is largely devoted to attacks upon the present Administration.

Mrs. O'Daniel, tall, willowy and soft-voiced, testified that the two sons, Pat and Mike, one a private and the other a lieutenant, are full owners of the newspaper.

"I am trying to keep their holdings together until they return," she said, and burst into tears as she added, "If they do return."

Pittsburgh Speech Tonight to Deal With 'Labor's Right'

By Edward T. Folliard

Albany, Oct. 19.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's campaign train is pointed tonight toward Pennsylvania, a battleground State whose 35 electoral votes may very well decide the 1944 presidential election.

Without this State, plus New York and its 47 electoral votes, it is almost impossible to see a victory for Governor Dewey, and the nominee's political aides make no attempt to argue to the contrary.

In Pittsburgh tomorrow night, the young Republican challenger will deliver a labor speech aimed at whittling down President Roosevelt's powerful support among industrial workers in this arsenal State.

"Labor's Right"

Paul Lockwood, secretary to the Governor, issued this statement in advance of the start from Albany:

"Govevrnor Dewey will discuss at Pittsburg Friday evening on the radio what happens to free labor under personal, one-man government and what labor has a right to look forward to under a new administration."

As the 1944 campaign heads for the stretch drive, it begins to take on the aspect of a thrilling joint debate, with Governor Dewey and President Roosevelt spelling each other before the microphones and seeking to win over the American electorate before November 7.

The news yesterday that President Roosevelt was going to take an automobile tour Saturday through four of the New York boroughs caused something of a sensation among the strategists in the Dewey camp.

Will Show in Ebbet's Field

They had never taken very seriously statements that he would not "camously President Roosevelt's earlier paign in the usual, partisan sense" and that it would not be "fitting" and that he would be "too busy" in war time.

They didn't take this very seriously because they knew that he had said pretty much the same thing in 1940. They were going on the assumption that he would make several speeches toward the end of the campaign, probably linking them with some phase of the war effort.

What astonished them was the news that Mr. Roosevelt was going to make an appearance in Ebbets Field in Brooklyn, where a gigantic rally will be held for Senator Robert F. Wagner, who is seeking reelection.

Governor Dewey himself, it is known, had turned down invitations to appear in baseball parks on the West Coast.

La Guardia Warning Reported

In Republican headquarters in New York City yesterday, GOP [illegible] are tremendously interested in the news from Washington. They have great respect for President Roosevelt's charm and his ability as a campaigner and vote-getter, and they were trying to calculate the effect of his decision to carry his fight right into the precincts.

What Gov. Dewey himself thought was not made known, but home of those around him took comfrt in the belief that the President must be wrried. It was their understanding that Mr. Roosevelt reached his decision after hearing some alarming reports from New York's Mayor, Fiorella La Guardia.

Gov. Dewey's speech tomorrow night in Pittsburgh will be his second major oration on the subject of labor. In his first, delivered in Seattle on September 18, he denounced the labor policy of the Roosevelt Administration, saying it had been "one of delays, bungling and incompetence."

Expected To Expand Theme

Tomorrow night in Pittsburgh the one-time racket-buster is expected to expand this by listing the counts in the indictment.

He is expected to dwell at length on the railway wage case which was bounced around Washington until the threat of a strike brought about seizure of the roads, and led a "high personage" (reported to be Gen. George C. Marshall) to charge that victory in Europe had been delayed six months. Inn the long run the railroad workers got a wage increase.

In Western Pennsylvania there are many coal miners and steel workers, just to mention two groups, who have become bitter over wartime economic controls and the difficulties of getting a raise in pay.

It is to these that Dewey will be addressing his remarks about "what happens to free labor under personal one-man government."

Warning to Nazis Supported by Dewey

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 19 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey indorsed tonight a State Department warning to Nazi leaders that they would "pay the penalty for their heinous crimes" if they carired out reported plans to exterminate Poles, Jews and other non-German nationals held in concentration camps.

In a formal statement, Dewey said:

"Information comes to this country from unquestionably reliable sources that the Nazis, trapped and knowing that they are faced with inevitable defeat, are now resorting to the known gangster terror device of threatening to exterminate their very victims—Poles, Jews and other non-German nationals—now imprisoned by them in their horrible concentration camps in parts of Poland and other countries still occupied by the Nazis.

"The civilized world is now in a position in unmistakable terms to warn the Nazis—military commanders, members of the German government, their aiders, abettors and supporters—that certain and inevitable justice awaits them for these brutal and wanton murders if their schemes should be carried out.

"I am happy to note that our State Department has issued a warning that 'if these plans are carried out, those guilty of such murderous acts will be brought to justice and pay the penalty for their hinous crimes.'

"American public opinion will fully support the statement issued by our Department of State.'"

The Governor, who has maintained a friendly attitude toward Secretary of State Hull throughout the campaign, had no immediate comment on a State Department statement challenging some parts of his foreign policy speech in New York last night.

Baby's Flight To Grandma's Arms Delayed

London, Oct. 19 (U.P.).—This is addressed to the paternal grandparents of that chap whom the Reader's Digest [illegible] Boy Blue," and who is to take the place of your dead soldier son in your home:

The baby's passport has been lost and his arrival by plane, as arranged by President Roosevelt, will be delayed, perhaps a day or two.

But don't worry about it. He is in good hands and you never in your life saw people so anxious to help get him into your arms.

The British passport office made a special concession to issue a passport for the young fellow who came from the love between your son, before he went to his death in France, and a British girl in Liverpool.

The railway company, when it heard about the loss of the passport, ordered searched the entire train in which the baby was traveling with an Army nurse, and issued special instructions to all passenger agents along the route to join the hunt.

If it isn't found, the passport office in Glasgow probably can make out a new one within 24 hours. They'll leave a couple of blank lines on it, one for profession, the other for a signature. Some day after you've given him a name, he can fill in the blank lines as your adopted son.

Meanwhile, rest easy with the knowledge that over here everyone that counts is doing all he can to speed him on his way. Your appeal to President Roosevelt was successful and just as soon as these bothersome technical details are worked out, that chubby little chap will start his speedy journey to meet gran'ma and grdan'pa.

You'll like him. He's a swell kid.

Gray Ladies' Class Seeking Applicants

The Alexandria chapter of the Red Cross is continuing to accept applicants for the fourth Gray Ladies class which opened this week at the chapter house, 417 Duke st., Alexandria, as a few vacancies remain.

Sessions are held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons for a three-week period. Applicants from 18 to 50 having high school education are invited to see Mrs. Frank S. Ketcham, chairman, today during the hour before class begins at 1:30 p. m.

The chapter has stressed that it is important to form a large class to replace personnel as many of the Gray Ladies who have been trained in Alexandria are wives of service men and have moved away, just as many nurses and nurses' aides also have had to leave to accompany their husbands to other stations.

The two-hour class periods are from 1:30 p. m. to 3:30 p. m. three times a week, and after the training period length of service at the Alexandria Hospital may be as little as four consecutive hours a week with a yearly minimum of 100 hours of service, Mrs. Ketcham said.

Polish Ace Calls 'End of Road' His Country's Darkest Hour

By Margaret Davis

Maj. Stanislaw Skalski, Poland's ranking flying ace who has fought the war from the skies since September 1, 1939, in nearly every European theater, yesterday sat in an armchair in the Polish Embassy here and spoke the sentiments of his 12,000 Polish airmen confreres.

SKALSKA

"As we are coming to the end, the road becomes more dark. This is perhaps the most critical moment of our history," he told reporters.

Under the flying falcon wings of Poland, the 28-year-old flier wears 11 decorations, including the highest ones his own country offers and three from Britain, a record of the lights to victory he himself has set during the last five years.

Yesterday he told about his most "interesting mission,"—coast patrol in Tunis Bay—when 98 huge six-motor German transports were bagged in one battle and turned the sea into a bath of flame.

"I learned the extent of our damage from a Pole, impressed to [illegible] Messerschmidts simply sat down on the water and burst into flame."

"The German fighters never were keen to defend their bombers either," he said.

Major Skalski, a member of the regular Polish air force, fled Poland for France in 1939. He went at once into the British RAF, with which he has fought from posts in Malta, Sicily, Italy and London, as well as in North Africa, where his Polish combat team was known as the Flying Circus. He has shot down 18 planes.

Bad Weather Fighters

A few weeks ago Major Stalski was in Paris and since then he has escorted American bombers to Berlin. "We have had no opposition from the Luftwaffe, more recently. Earlier they were bound to come out in bad weather but always laid low when the visibility was good."

During the French liberation poundings, however, the major said he did not angle with the Luftwaffe. "The Allied planes were so thick there really wasn't room for them," he stated matter-of-factly.

When he was in Paris early this past summer, food was hard to get. "Railroad tieups and damage to [illegible] food basket, made it necessary for GI Joe's from America to bring their K rations to the cafes and let the restaurants cook them."

"Most of France is not badly damaged, but in N$ormandy destruction has been appalling. Caen does not exist. You just see dust. It cannot be rebuilt, they must build a new city instead."

Regaining 1939 Look

"Just a few weeks ago, however, Paris looked like 1939 before the war," according to the major.

"Shooting down doodlebugs in England is good practice but not very interesting," he says.

The flying ace has met no Russians. Earlier this summer his squadron was to take part in a raid with Allied planes who bombed Berlin and landed in the Soviet. "Our orders were canceled before we left," he recalled.

Major Skalski is glad to see the country of Lieut. Col. Frances Gabreski, American flier from Pennsylvania, who asked to join his squadron when he first arrived in London and shot down 26 planes before he was taken prisoner. "Colonel Gabreski asked for and got several Polish pilots when he became a squadron leader himself," according to Major Skalski.

He says the Yanks told him, "If you come to America once, you never will want to go back. I don't know yet," he admitted. The American countryside in Maryland looks like Poland, he says, but he doesn't know what to expect of Fort Leavenworth, Kas., where he and three other Polish airmen will go nevt month to train as staff officers.

Tydings Vows Hospital Action After Election

Quick action after the November election on a bill to establish a 1500-bed hospital center in the District was promised yesterday by Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), who said he is too busy now seeking reelection to push the plan.

Tydings heads a special subcommittee of the Senate District Committee created to study and hold public hearings on the measure which he sponsored in the Senate. A companion bill, introduced by Representative Thomas D'Alesandro (D., Md.), is pending in the House.

Cost of the proposed medical center would be borne entirely by the Federal Government, but it would be operated on a nonprofit basis by participating private hospitals. Its nucleus would be Emergency and Garfield Hospitals.

Estimates furnished Tydings show that the center, equipped with the most modern scientific devices and staffed with outstanding medical authorities, would cost between five million dollars and $7,500,000.

Anticipating early subcommittee approval of the bill, Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Minn.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, has given it the No. 1 position on the committee calendar.

might to the attacks on Formosa air centers.

Southwest Pacific bombers cooperated by battering Japanese airfields in the southern and central Philippines as the carrier pilots hit airdromes in the Manila area and to the north.

It was a three-way squeeze play and, if Japanese reports are true, resulted in MacArthur's return to the rich archipelago where the American flag was hauled down, except in guerilla strongholds, in May, 1942.

Public X-Ray Tests Planned In Alexandria

Arrangements have been made to conduct a city-wide voluntary X-ray survey of all Alexandria residents on Tuesday, October 31, it was announced yesterday by Dr. John A. Sims, president of the Alexandria Tuberculosis Association. He said Gadsby's Tavern, 136 North Royal st., has been selected as the location.

According to Mrs. Ruth Powers, executive secretary of the association, tests are made available at a small cost, while through the sale of Christmas seals, free X-rays will be provided for those who are unable to pay.

According to State estimates, approximately 1500 deaths from tuberculosis are reported each year in Virginia, while in the war on the disease, X-ray is considered the most accurate method of determining whether any infection is present. It is particularly true in the early stages when enither the doctor nor the patient may be able to find any signs of the disease, health officials emphasize.

National VFW Adopts Million-Dollar Budget

Kansas City, Oct. 18 (AP).—A yearly budget of more than a million dollars, described as the largest in the organization's history, was approved for the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States by national officers and council members today.

Of the amount, approximately $500,000 will be spent for the rehabilitation, welfare and service programs for returning war veterans, said Jean A. Brunner, Forest Hill, N. Y., commander in chief.

U. S. to Support Potatoes by Loans

College Park, Md., Oct. 18 (AP).—The Government's price support program on late Irish potatoes will be limited to crop loans and there will be no purchase by the Office of Distribution for diversion into livestock feed, the Maryland office of the Agriculture Adjustment Agency said today.

Loans will be made, however, at the rate of $1.71 per 100 pounds on U. S. No. 1 quality potatoes in farm storage and $1.81 in track-side storage, Joseph H. Blandford, Maryland AAA chairman announced.

Takoma Park's Noiseless Siren Heralds News

The Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department has a new siren—a noiseless one. Still its reports are going all over the world.

A four-page newspaper called the Siren filled with newsy bits of the town and county is making its first appearance to members of the fire department now serving in the armed forces. Published monthly by the department's chief, Dewey Hayes and Dave "Squirrel" are the editors.

"The Siren sure is swell and hits the spot," wrote Byron Souder, USN, former town policeman. Former Chief Ed Lee with the Seabees in the South Pacific wrote, "It reminds me of home and sort of makes me homesick." Still another letter to the volunteers from Sergt. Norman Martin in England, son of Joseph Martin, president of the department, expressed hope that the firemen will continue their new venture.

So far 50 copies are printed for each monthly edition, but the department feels this will soon have to be increased due to the response from the "home boys." It was originally planned to be sent to 30 members of the department now fighting for Uncle Sam.

Aeronautic Meeting Set

A meeting to organize the lower Montgomery Chapter of the National Aeronautic Association will be held Monday at 8 p. m. in the county building, Bethesda.

The group will be composed of air-minded men and women of Takoma Park, Silver Spring, Kensington, Chevy Chase, Bethesda Garrett Park, Glen Echo and Cabin John, to secure adequate "Air Park" facilities for lower Montgomery.

Speakers from the NAA and the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce will be on the program, according to King Mularkey, acting secretary of the chapter.

Woman Hurt by Cab

Mrs. Francis Reuben, 21, of 7212 Flower ave., Takoma Park, a nurse at Walter Reed Hospital, suffered minor injuries yesterday when she was struck by a taxicab while standing on the sidewalk at Flower and Carroll aves., Takoma Park.

Driven by William S. Matthews, 21, of 901 Maple ave., Takoma Park, the cab jumped the curb where Mrs. Reuben was standing, police said. Matthews was charged with reckless driving. Mrs. Reuben was treated for ankle injuries at Walter Reed.

Clinic Discussed

Plans to establish an out-patient clinic in Silver Spring were discussed last night by members of the Silver Spring Health Lay Committee and local physicians at a meeting in the health center.

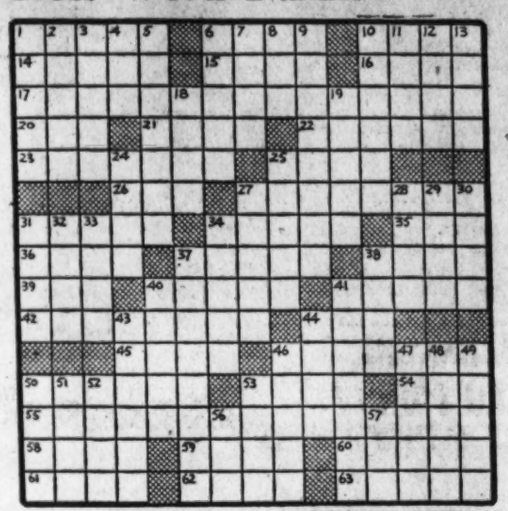

The project will be formed according to plans set up by the State Health Department, Mrs. R. C. Zschiegner, chairman of the committee, said. Until State funds are available next year the clinic will be financed by the committee.

Broome to Speak

"The Philosophy of the Montgomery School System," will be discussed by Dr. Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of county schools, at the first fall meeting of the Four Corners' P-TA, Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the North Intermediate building, Old Bladensburg rd.

The program is the first of a series of talks carrying out the year's program theme, "Your Child and His School," Mrs. J. Calvin Keene, president, announced.

"The worst of it is—I'd just ordered a Whiskey Sour made with Calvert Reserve"

Your friends will describe, in glowing terms, a Whiskey Sour made like this: 1 teaspoon sugar, juice of ½ lemon and ½ lime, jigger of Calvert Reserve (there's more of it now!). Shake well with ice cubes. Strain into 4 oz. glass. Add slice of orange. One taste of its "soft" flavor tells you Calvert Reserve is strictly pre-war in quality..."the choicest you can drink or serve"!

Have a Coca-Cola = The family welcomes you

. . . or greeting new and old friends

Unexpected visitors can be expected in wartime. Sons bring home their wives. Soldiers on furlough drop in without notice. New neighbors come to call. With wartime shortages, a simple but hearty welcome is best. It's what you share in friendliness, not what you have, that counts. There's no more friendly greeting than Have a "Coke". And you can play host on a moment's notice when you have Coca-Cola on hand in your refrigerator. Have a "Coke" says Welcome . . . makes new and old friends feel at home with you and yours.

Coca-Cola -the global high-sign

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called "Coke".

Dodd's Death Not Foul Play, Army Decides

Lieut. Daniel Dodd, whose body was found in Shield's Lake, Richmond, last week was not murdered but died as a result of attempted suicide or accidental fall, an Army Board of Inquiry said in a preliminary report yesterday.

The board's report, in part, read: "The board does not believe that Dodd's death resulted from foul play. At this time, it is not possible to conclude whether or not Dodd took his own life and only through further investigation can information be obtained on which to base such a conclusion one way or another."

The board's report was released one week after the body of the Army officer was found floating in Shield's Lake. The report said that a further study of the case will be made and this will be based on conclusions of the investigation of the man's organs and specimens of his brain and blood.

Lieutenant Dodd was a convoy security officer and was attached to the Quartermaster Corps. His mother's home is at Chevy Chase, Md.

He was thought to have arrived in Richmond sometime Sunday, October 8. The time of his death was estimated at about 9 p. m. October 11. His body was found floating in the lake the following morning. The autopsy report said that the lieutenant's death was due to asphyxia but the cause is as yet undetermined.

A further investigation of the officer's whereabouts from September 22, the last time he was seen by his mother at his home in Chevy Chase, until the time of his death, is being made.

Scottish Rite Reunion Set For Alexandria

110 North St. Asaph St. TEmple 6538.

Ninety candidates will receive Scottish Rite Masonic degrees from the fourth through the thirty-second at the annual fall reunion of the Scottish Rite Masons of northern Virginia and the Valley of Virginia at the George Washington Masonic National Memorial on Shooter's Hill, Alexandria.

The program, to open Monday and cover more than two weeks, will close with a reception on November 8 in honor of the class of candidates.

Will Honor Lodge Custodian

According to plans announced by City Treasurer Roger C. Sullivan of Alexandria, general chairman of the reunion committee, the class is being named in honor of the late George W. Zachary, who served for many years as custodian of the Alexandria-Washington lodge room in City Hall, where he gave lectures to the public on the valuable relics, which date back to the time when George Washington was the first worshipful master of the lodge.

Zachary was thirty-second degree Mason and a member of the Scottish Rite in Alexandria. At his death he was buried in Ivy Hill Cemetery, Alexandria, with Masonic honors. Petitions for membership in the class named in his honor closed Wednesday.

Leading guests at the ceremonies for awarding of degrees and at the reception in honor of the class, at the close of the rites in the temple, will include the following Scottish Rite officials: John W. Cowles, sovereign grand commander, and Robert S. Crump, grand chancellor and sovereign grand inspector general of the Supreme Council of the Southern Jurisdiction of Scottish Rite Masons.

Committees and Workers

Reception committee, A. M. Sherwood, Erdman T. Stulz, Harry A. Leake, Robert A. Keith, Henry Casey, Samuel E. Wade, Benjamin D. Edwards, Thomas Fately, Harry H. Newton, Riley W. Nixon and Arthur A. Paul; property committee, Henry Casey and Clarence M. Davison; organist, Samuel E. Wade.

Degree directors: A. M. Sherwood, Erdman T. Stulz, Riley W. Nixon, and Harry H. Newton; communication: Newton and Nixon; ushers, Godfrey P. Runaldue, Walter H. Trudgill, Jack A. Sullivan, Thomash Fately, Gerald N. Anderson, William Michelbach, John E. Posey, Benjamin D. Edwards, Kenneth Nicholson and Allen Beeson.

Members of the Jessica Callahan chapter of the order of the Eastern Star will serve supper at 6:30 p. m. on the following evenings: October, 23, 24, 25, 30, 31, and November 1.

'Canned Heat' Suspected In Second Alexandria Death

The second Negro death in less than a week believed attributable to respiratory paralysis from drinking wood alcohol in "canned heat," was reported yesterday in Alexandria by Detective Lieut. Russell A. Hawes of the Alexandria Police Department.

He said he had received a report from the city coroner, Dr. John A. Sims, following an examination of Eugene Conway, 45, of the 500 block of North Alfred st., who died Wednesday night shortly after he reached the Alexandria Hospital. Dr. Sims said he was reasonably sure that death was due to poisoning from the substance.

Conway was found in the gargage quarters of Tillman Neal on North Alfred st., by Neal and James Waters of 816 Madison st., Alexandria, both Negroes, but lived only until he reached the hospital dispensary where he was taken by the Alexandria Rescue Squad.

Lieutenant Hawes has issued a warning to Alexandria merchants and storekeepers that they face prosecution for the promiscuous sale of "canned heat" to known addicts of the substance who use it as an intoxicant. Police have found evidence at the homes of victims that the substance has been melted down to separate the alcohol from the wax to provide an intoxicating drink.

Administrator Named For '15-Cent Estate'

Sacramento, Cal. (U.P.)—Superior Judge Malcolm C. Glenn has granted letters of administration in the 15-cent estate of John Edwin Mooney, who died about 60 years ago.

Emerson W. Read, local attorney, was appointed administrator after he told Judge Glenn the legal proceedings were necessary to quit the title to swamp property owned by Mooney at the time of his death. The land is worth "about 15 cents," Read said.

Crows Too Hard At Navy Blimp

Coquille, Wash. (U.P.)—When a Navy blimp from a nearby airport paid its first call to this district, the chickens of a northside residence apparently thought a mammoth hawk was after them, judging from the cackling and noise they made.

All except one, a white cockerel, sought safety in the chicken house. The cockerel, however, stood his ground, and to show the frightened hens there was no danger, crowed several times in defiance.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

From a Wine Cookbook

Hankering for something special? Here it is—stew with the exciting, savory goodness that only wine can give!

Lamb Stew Sauterne

Cut 2 lbs. lean lamb shoulder into 2-inch cubes and place in deep bowl with 2 sliced onions and 1 or 2 peeled cloves of garlic. Add 1½ cups Sauterne or Rhine Wine; cover, and let stand in refrigerator 2 or 3 hours. Discard garlic, take out meat, roll in seasoned flour, brown in 4 tbsps. hot oil in kettle. Add wine and onion, and 3 cups water; cover and simmer until tender (about 1½ hours). Add vegetables; season, and cook until tender, about 20 minutes. Serves 4 to 6.

Pour glasses of the same wine at table

You don't need a "special" wine for cooking. For example, when you've opened a bottle of Sauterne or Rhine Wine to use in cooking the lamb stew above, serve the remainder, well chilled, in glasses at the table. Ask your dealer for these California white table wines.

Meadors' PEANUT BRITTLE
MADE ONLY DURING THE PEANUT SEASON -- SEPTEMBER THROUGH MAY

The DISPENSABLE man

We're not going to vote for you, Tom Dewey.

We thought you might like to know why . . .

It's not that we're straight-ticket Democrats. Some of us, in fact, are Republicans who'll be voting for a Democrat for the first time.

But we all agree on one thing: we don't think you have what it takes to be President of the United States. Not these days, anyhow.

Most of us have watched you come along politically, under the forced draft of your party's elders, and wondered whether you'd let yourself be talked into running in '44. We're sorry you accepted. After all, you've been an executive a total of only two years. If we as business men were hiring someone for the Presidency, we'd certainly demand more executive experience than that.

And since you were nominated, we've listened to you most carefully—from Philadelphia, Hollywood, Oklahoma City—and we're forced to conclude that you don't seem to have the stature for the biggest job of them all.

We've yet to see you come forward with a single working program for handling the country's toughest problems of the next four years. Where is your plan for reconversion of industry to the products of peace? Where are your proposals for expanding our international trade? What will you do about assuring full production and full employment? Everyone says you wait, before making up your mind on big issues, until you see the results of public opinion polls. The people, Tom, don't want a follower right now. They want a leader.

We have yet to hear a good reason for voting for you, young man. You attack the President in every speech but when you finally do come out in favor of some things, they turn out to be collective bargaining, social security and other benefits Roosevelt gave this country years ago.

No, we haven't found any substance in your campaign. Certainly not in your many attempts to convince us that the President is a Communist, or a tool of the Communists. (Your brain trust slipped, there, son. Nobody believes that kind of wild talk any more.) And we're disturbed at the Hooverism in your philosophy which impelled you to term our lend-lease program "an end to free government in the U.S." and to call the President's 50,000 plane goal for 1942 "a publicity stunt." (Did you know we turned out 47,873 that year—and 85,946 in '43?)

No, Tom Dewey, the next four years are going to take a man in the White House. We've got a man now—and we think we'd better keep him. What's more, we think he's a great man.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt is the kind of a man school children a hundred years from now will learn about with awe—and reverence.

We hope, for the sake of the country, that you turn out to be that kind of man yourself, some day . . .

Sympathetic business men are urged to support our newspaper and radio campaign in key states. Time is short. Send your check today—now...

Are These People In Your Post-War Plans?

Millions of friendly people in the beautiful Caribbean islands, Venezuela and the Guianas are eagerly awaiting opportunities to buy U. S. products of all kinds. Denied many necessities and luxuries by war shipping-shortages, the pent-up needs of this near-by export market are an invitation to business executives planning ahead for post-war sales expansion.

For many years the Alcoa Steamship Company fleet has served the close-at-hand Caribbean area shown on the map at the right. We have learned the needs, the wants, the desired luxuries of the people. We know their trade customs. This information is available to American business executives who are interested in expanding post-war sales territories to absorb their increased peacetime production capacity.

Army With Pikes

In his decree setting up a German Home Army, Adolf Hitler provided the world—and the German people themselves—with grim proof of the desperate plight in which the Third Reich now finds itself. Of all the "total" mobilizations which have been ordered in Germany during recent years, this latest is the most total of all. It represents not only the final scraping of Germany's manpower barrel, but the use of the barrel staves as well. All men between 16 and 60 who are able to bear arms and are not already engaged in actual military resistance are to be put into formations to defend the home soil. Significantly, this German guerilla force is to be under the direction not of the German army but of "proved party institutions" such as the SA (Storm Troops) the SS (Elite Guards) and the Hitler Youth. They are to be given military instruction and to be armed and equipped and Heinrich Himmler is to have over-all charge.

All this constitutes a clear admission by the Nazi leaders that they are not oversanguine about the possibility of holding back the Allied tide now beating against the walls of Festung Germania. In fact, Hitler was very careful in his decree to hold out no hope of that victory he has hitherto promised the Germans. The best he can offer his people is that, with the help of the newly formed guerilla units, Germany will be able to throw the Allies back "and keep them away from the Reich until such time when peace is secured that will guarantee the future of Germany." And he has also found it necessary to add that this effort will have to be undertaken by Germany alone. Germany, he admits, has lost "all" her allies.

The importance of this development, marking though it does the high tide of German defeatism and desperation, is not to be minimized. If Hitler succeeds in his present effort, the smashing by the Allies of the German army as an organized military force will have as its sequel not the end of resistance in the Reich, but a long period of forcible pacification. But it remains to be seen how well and for how long the fanatical spirit which Hitler is trying to inject into these aggregations of military discards will survive the fact of military defeat when it occurs.

Anticartelism

It is a welcome sign of the times that the Foreign Policy Association has gone on record with a plea for an easing of the Administration's opposition to American participation in international cartels. The present attitude, as we have constantly insisted, is thoroughly unrealistic, though the President in several communications of late has reaffirmed the Administration's anticartelism. Our political modus in the world has been set by the Dumbarton agreement. It is an equilibrium among the major powers resting upon a respective paramountcy in the world areas they protect. It follows that world peace will depend upon the removal of points of friction among the major powers, actual or potential—in fact, upon achieving commercial cooperation in line with our present political cooperation. "Dog-eat-dog" trading, as the Foreign Policy Association says, is bound to create future power struggles.

In these circumstances there must be some prior understanding over the future rules of world trading. The Foreign Policy Association is on the right track, it seems to us, in saying that the job of reorganizing and reconstructing world trade "obviously calls for international action." We have ourselves said that the situation calls for an economic Dumbarton Conference. Too many misunderstandings may arise before the Economic and Social Council provided for in the Dumbarton setup can get to work. What the Foreign Policy Association has specifically in mind for this tribunal or council is the supervision of cartels. It suggests that all cartels, whether public or private, be registered with the council, which would give full publicity to the various commodity and industrial agreements involved.

The suggestion has much merit. It has been advanced ever since the last peace conference by Mr. Huston Thompson, former chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, who says that President Wilson declared that the idea lay back of Article 23 of the Covenant providing for "equitable treatment for all members of the League." Nothing, alas, came of the proposal, with the result that between wars "corners" were rampant, producers banded together to keep up prices, limit output, and distribute markets, and consumers, and in particular American consumers, were gouged. An international conference should lay down the rules of world trade and an international tribunal should see that they are carried out.

Admittedly cartel is a bad word. It is the synonym in our foreign trade for a word that is even uglier, namely, trust. But the word cartel has developed its bad connotation from the abuse of cartels, i. e., the failure of any government authority to exercise supervision. Freedom of enterprise abroad for every American is an expression, as the President says, of the "American way of life." But the world is not run by Americans. Nor can we expect that the world's great traders will adopt our system in their trade activities. What is needed, what we should aim at, is a common denominator of rules, so that commercial friction will be avoided by the major powers.

President Wilson clearly had in mind such a need, and such a benefit to American exporters, when he sponsored the Webb-Pomerene Export Trade Act of 1918. That act allowed associations to be set up in the export trade. However, the Department of Justice asserts that the Webb Act does not permit export associations to become parties to foreign cartels, but merely authorizes their creation for the purpose of enabling our exporters to compete more effectively with foreign cartels in overseas markets. Consequently associations organized under the Webb Act have been warned that they will be regarded as operating in violation of the Sherman Act if they become parties to international agreements providing for division of world markets, fixing of world prices, or other restrictive provisions. This announced policy of applying the prohibitions of the Sherman Act to export associations is not suited to the kind of commercial world into which the nations are being ushered. The international cartel is a form of organization that is going to be an essential aid to orderly trading after this war. We are glad that the Foreign Policy Association has adopted this view.

Two Unities

Governor Dewey at the New York Herald Tribune forum went the limit in backing the plan for the organization of collective security that came out of Dumbarton Oaks. Indeed, he regards himself as one of the underwriters of it. That is the right attitude. In the talk on foreign policy Governor Dewey condemned the snipers who fail to realize the importance of recognizing that "a beginning has been made." He called it a "grand" beginning. We may all take comfort from this example of statesmanship that the New Yorker has provided for the Republican Party. National unity is the sine qua non of the unity of the United Nations which the New Yorker is pledged to conserve in the peacemaking. He has done everything that could be expected of him to lift the security discussion above the level of partisan politics.

But it is one thing to exclude the security discussion from campaign debate, quite another to exclude foreign policy and the conduct of foreign policy. That would be foolish for the challenger to do. For there is much in Mr. Roosevelt's conduct of foreign affairs that is questionable. Governor Dewey, for example, was on sure ground, in our opinion, in taking the President to task for his policy, or lack of it, toward France. Here is likewise an example of a personal diplomacy which is thoroughly objectionable. The American attitude toward France is wholly presidential. In refusing to accord any kind of recognition to the new regime in Paris, the President is actuated, evidently, by two reasons. One is personal dislike for the personnel in it. The other is a feeling that this Government ought to await a general election in France before taking action. The former reason is a highly dangerous element in any diplomacy. The latter is unrealistic. Time is marching on, and we shall have need of representative Frenchmen in the discussion of the future of Germany long before a French election can possibly take place, for there can be no election till the French prisoners have been released from captivity. In the case of France the President shows himself a victim of what one great Secretary of State called "the commonest error of statesmanship." He clings to "the carcasses of dead policies."

In attacking the President's record as a diplomatist, however, the Republican candidate spilled over into dubious illustrations. For instance, his criticism of the armistice with Romania was deplorable, since it is not based upon fact, and since, moreover, it caters to Russophobia. Governor Dewey charges that the agreement with Romania was signed in our name by Melinosky. What of it? Didn't General Eisenhower sign the agreement with Italy in the name of the Soviet Union? Nor was there any disposition of territory, or the fixing of the future frontiers of Romania, as the Republican candidate says. A final settlement of frontiers was left until the general peace has been decided. "The striking thing about the armistice terms which the Allies, meeting in Moscow, have granted to Romania, is that those terms bear a British and an American imprint as well as a Russian." This was how The Post greeted the armistice with Romania.

But, aside from a blemish or two of this sort, Governor Dewey's speech on foreign policy gets our applause, for it is evidence that the candidate, if elected President, will work to make the security organization the pivot of our foreign policy, and rely not upon himself but upon his appointees to conduct our foreign relations. Part of the reason that our State Department is constantly stymied is due to the President's habit of taking matters completely out of its hands.

Back To The Philippines

Two and a half years after one of the most disastrous defeats in American history, we are definitely on the road back: Bataan is to be avenged. The Island of Suluan in Leyte Gulf is a long way from Manila, Bataan and Corregidor, and also a considerable distance from Davao. So if, as the Tokyo radio insists, our troops have made a landing on Suluan, we still have a formidable job ahead in driving the Japanese completely out of the Philippines. It is nonetheless a heartening fact that we have begun the task, that we are now moving in force into the islands.

The decision to invade the Philippines at this time was not an easy one for our high command to make. To many of our strategists, strategic considerations pointed in other directions—to a direct assault on the Japanese home islands, to a landing on Formosa, which lies between Japan and the Philippines, possibly to a thrust at the China coast, with both Formosa and the Philippines by-passed. But their counsel didn't prevail, and the plan now under development is the one proposed by General MacArthur, who is animated by sentimental as well as strategical considerations.

Of course, much can be said on strategic grounds for the invasion of the Philippines at this time. Given the formidable nature of the Formosa terrain, and the size of the Japanese garrison, a landing on that island at the present juncture would have proved a costly and difficult venture. Furthermore, the fierce assault on the airfields and ground installations of Formosa have probably made it unusable as a Japanese supply and staging base for some time. An attack on the Japanese islands would be fraught with major hazards unless and until the Japanese fleet has been destroyed and the use of the Bonin, the Ryukyu and the Kurile Islands denied to the enemy. As for a thrust to the China coast, the recent Japanese victories in China, which have deprived our air force of forward bases from which an air umbrella could be put over our amphibious forces, made that project unfeasible at this time.

From the central Philippines our air power, once firmly established, could make it hot for the enemy on Luzon and Mindanao. Furthermore, there is no possibility that this operation in Leyte Gulf will be interfered with by the Japanese fleet. The enemy navy appears to have a wholesome unwillingness to stick its neck out. Anyway, we now have our foot on the ladder leading to the reoccupation of the islands, and that will be a vast satisfaction to the American people.

Battle Of The Statler

Apparently the Battle of the Statler is to go down in history without even so much as a decision. The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee has backed away from it as meekly as a dove in the presence of tomcats fighting on a backyard fence. Once the committee seemed to see in the episode some unsavory interference with political rights. But after probing more deeply into the mystery than anyone else has been able to do, it suddenly discovers that it has no jurisdiction to investigate a brawl in a Washington hotel, that it has more important work to do, and that continuation of the inquiry would "not be worth while."

In these excuses for abandoning the inquiry there is a rather strong suggestion that the committee got hold of a hot potato. That suspicion is strengthened by the committee's unwillingness to release the 14 affidavits it has collected from persons who participated in the fracas or had direct information concerning it. Senator Green says that the stories told in the affidavits are so at variance that the committee could not hope to fix responsibility for the fight. But that scarcely justifies the committee's unwillingness to let the public draw its own conclusions.

Presumably, then, we shall never know the facts. Specifically, did the teamsters, in their postprandial hilarity and enthusiasm after the President had addressed them, sock the two naval officers because the latter didn't seem to share that enthusiasm? Alas, the truth will be locked away. But the intense interest which Senator Green and his colleagues have aroused in the case may be expected to carry further on the wings of mystery than it possibly could have on the basis of a senatorial report. And along with the mystery goes isolated bits of information. There is, for example, the action of the pummeled naval officers in releasing their own affidavits and their eagerness to submit their statements to the searching examination of a public hearing. The unwillingness of the teamsters involved in this shabby brawl to do likewise supplies a key to the incident which the Senate's committee deems advisable to forget.

HOME FRONT

The stranger looked to westward, where the hills
Come down, low-shouldered, misty and remote;
Somewhere a fog-bound trawler called its fear
Out of the sullen hollow of its throat.
Night and the stars closed in; to us there came
No sudden call to hide, no cry of dread.
The stranger turned to me; his tired eyes
Accused my peace. "How safe you are," he said.

Yet here, in little space, all battles rage;
Here the sword penetrates where none may see;
All wounds received wake throbbing in this place,
And here all deaths retrace their agony.
Here, not a garden but may camouflage
Some alien beachhead taken unaware,
And not a window but may serve to mark
Some proud and lonely outpost of despair.

Dams Create An Issue

Seattle, Wash.

LOOMING LARGER than all the political arguments in this campaign, in the Northwest, are the two huge masonry structures that have made possible the creation here of a new industrial empire. Grand Coulee and Bonneville Dams, spanning the mighty Columbia River, are the greatest source of water power in the world.

Started shortly after President Roosevelt took office, they were completed in time to contribute to the winning of the war. Without Coulee and Bonneville, we would have been hard put to it for the extra power to make planes.

The two dams made possible the first aluminum plants ever built west of the Mississippi. Dr. Paul J. Raver, Bonneville power administrator, says that more than a third of the country's combat planes have been made from aluminum produced with power generated on the Columbia. The new dams provide the driving force for the Kaiser shipyards and the Boeing aircraft plant.

In the fiscal year of 1944, the two dams netted $20,893,363 from the sale of power. Of the 250 million dollars that Coulee and Bonneville cost, roughly 50 million dollars has already been returned to the Government. This is a bit of shock for the skeptics who predicted the two projects would be white elephants.

AND POWER is not the most dramatic aspect of these two great masonary walls athwart the Columbia. Grand Coulee will eventually irrigate 1,250,000 acres of alluvial land in this State. Plans call for making land available, as it's irrigated, to returning veterans. Big corporation farms are forbidden. One man can own 40 acres, with 80 acres the limit to a family.

There is something fabulous about Grand Coulee. The water flowing over its spillway dwarfs Niagara Falls. Four hydraulic engineers from Soviet Russia have been studying Coulee. They are the men who will direct the rebuilding of Dnieprostroy, the great Russian dam blown up in the path of the advancing Germans early in the war. The original builder of Dnieprostroy, the late Col. Hugh Cooper, one of America's greatest engineers, was an early advocate of Grand Coulee.

People here in the Northwest are acutely conscious of this great power potential and what it means for the future. Already, these two dams are supplying nearly half of all the power produced in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Utah.

IN HIS SPEECHES on the West coast, Governor Dewey didn't mention public power. In fact, he failed to discuss any of the special problems close to this region, such as irrigation and land use. He did promise to put a Westerner in his Cabinet, and that is something they feel strongly about here—lack of representation in Washington.

Dewey said in an interview, which received little prominence, that while he favored generation of power by public authority, he believed that distribution should be through local agencies. That touches on an issue in the present campaign in this State.

Referendum 25 on the State ballot would make it possible for counties to band together to establish a power authority with the right to issue bonds and take over private utilities. This has stirred a bitter fight. They say that referendum 25 is likely to lose unless Senator Homer Bone, appointed to a Federal judgship and out of politics, comes back to renew his ancient championship of public power.

I feel that this part of the country is bound to grow great; bound to keep much of the industrial gain of the war. They talk out here of "Eastern domination" and what big industry in the East can do to cut them back.

But the upsurge will be too great. The future of this country is linked to the development of Alaska, which seems bound to come. And the land has its prophets; younger men like Capt. Richard L. Neuberger, who has done much to make the rest of us conscious of what is happening here.

In the Northwest, you feel an impatience with "politics as usual." Out here they want to get the war over and get on with their future.

Out Of Context

By Ernest Lindley

Demobilization Question

GOVERNOR DEWEY CLEARLY treasures his allegation that the Roosevelt Administration is planning to keep men in the armed service after they cease to be needed there, as a sort of make-work or unemployment relief project. To the extent that he can make anyone believe it, it is a valuable campaign asset.

So far he has cited in its support only two bits of testimony. One was an impromptu comment by General Hershey, head of Selective Service. As General Hershey himself has written, he was merely expressing a personal opinion on a matter outside his field and for which he has no responsibility.

Now Dewey has fallen back on a quotation from a report submitted by Frederic A. Delano, the President's uncle, in his capacity as chairman of the National Resources Planning Board. This was an official report from a committee charged with the duty of studying the problems of shifting men in the services and in war production back to peacetime activities. As Dewey said, this report discussed the pros and cons of rapid military demilitarization. But what he quoted as the conclusion was in fact a portion of the resume of arguments against rapid demobilization.

After surveying the arguments on both sides, the report definitely recommended rapid demobilization. This recommendation read: "5. A general policy of speedy, but orderly and controlled, military demobilization should be adopted, coupled with the use of all reasonable plans and measures to increase the employment available to those being demobilized."

INCIDENTALLY, much of the discussion in the report supposed that the wars against Japan and Germany would end simultaneously. It is as near a certainty as anything in war can be that Germany, even if it is able to fight through the winter, will be beaten a year or two ahead of Japan. This will mean a two-stage demobilization, which will be less difficult to manage.

If this misrepresentation stood alone, it might be attributed charitably to hasty reading or faulty understanding by members of Dewey's research staff. But it does not stand alone. Dewey repeatedly has torn utterances by the President or high officials from their context, twisting the meaning and, in some cases, completely reversing it. There is no room for argument about these distortions: anyone who takes the trouble to read the original utterances can see the distortions for himself.

Tactics of this sort are not new to the lower levels of politics. But ordinarily in presidential campaigns they are left for the most part to the political hatchet men down the line.

Their novelty in this campaign lies in their liberal use by a man seeking the highest office in the land in one of the most critical periods of our history.

MANY OF THE respectable newspapers supporting Dewey have been silent editorially about the worst of these distortions. Possibly they are too flagrant for honest newspapermen to defend, even in the zeal of a campaign. There may be reputable and reliable Washington correspondents who believe that the Administration plans to delay military demobilization to relieve unemployment. So far none has come to the attention of this column, although some have wryly defended Dewey's tactics in this respect as clever campaigning.

Up to the point they may have been. But it is possible that Dewey is overdoing them. The facts do not always catch up with every allegation. But when some of them begin to catch up with some allegations, the value of these tactics begins to depreciate.

Besides, one suspects that more or less independent voters regard the real issues of the campaign as important and grave enough to require Dewey's full attention and they may begin to wonder why he seems to wish to create fictitious ones.

Under 18

I have been reading with great interest the articles on teen-age Government girls written since Miss Berrum was murdered. It seems that the majority of writers have the opinion that the girls can go to places of entertainment such as the USO for healthful and chaperoned recreation. That is all well and good for girls over 18, but I have yet to find a USO club that will take girls under 18 into the club as a member. In view of the fact that the Government employs many girls of 16 and 17 years, it seems that these same girls should be considered mature enough to be a member of the various organizations.

The dormitories do have some recreation programs, but I think that they should have a real program of entertainment for every night, have persons in charge who know how to handle young people and have a regular planned USO club close enough that the girls won't consider the transportation problem a hardship.

After all, if these girls are old enough to work with persons over 18 and be treated as mature people in their offices, they are certainly old enough to be permitted membership in the service organizations in the District, Maryland and Virginia. A GOVERNMENT GIRL.

Navy Gifts

I wish to quote you from a letter received by me from a sailor aboard ship "somewhere in the South Pacific." He has given me suggestions for Christmas gifts which I think will be of interest to everyone.

" . . . The things I mention are practical and are the suggestions of not only myself but several lads who are sitting in my office as I write. . . . I asked them what they could really use and what they thought would be most appreciated. White socks are way up on the list, cotton preferable to wool, due to shrinkage. Get them half to a full size larger. We miss the darndest things out here — guitar strings, photo album mounts, sun glasses, wash cloths, picture frames, photo albums for snapshots the fellows' families send them. Little things we forgot to buy back home in the hustle and bustle of leaving. Poker chips are scarce as hen's teeth. Dice are selling at $10 a pair—the Navy frowns on African golf—the Army sells them by the gross at PX's. I have a thermos bottle that's worth its weight in gold. Wooden shower clogs at about $1 a pair are a "must." Fellows are carving them by hand and cutting up elastic bunk straps to make them."

Two Pants Suits

On reading of the decision of the War Production Board to continue the ban on the manufacture of two-pants suits, while permitting the resumption of several wasteful styles, one is filled with wonder at the mental processes of the people who write these orders. By what process of reasoning do they arrive at the conclusion that materials and labor will be saved by making twice as many suits, each containing, say three-fourths as much material as before?

From France

I am sending you the following excerpt from a letter I received from my husband, written September 22, in France:

"Schickelgruber's boys may be losing the war, but they're doing it the hard way—for us as well as themselves. They still have a bit of English on the ball. It can't last a hell of a lot longer—but that sounds much better here in black and white than it does when you're muttering it into your beard, lying in a ditch, hearing the mortar shells popping all around. Or looking at the less lucky guys being brought in by the medics.

"Too bad newspapers and newscasts aren't accompanied by battlefield sound effects. It's the racket that knocks hell out of you. Maybe some of these people, overanxious to get out from under before the defense plants slow up, would think twice before quitting for a nonessential job. They seem to think that the war is over. There's a lot of guys here that will tell them differently, if they ask. And I imagine the guys in the Pacific might find a word or two to say, also."

Recognizing France

Like you, I rejoice in the promise of eventual restoration of France to the rank which has always belonged to her. I am a little more pessimistic regarding the motives for delaying that recognition, in view of the fact that all the post-war policies are being discussed and possibly decided without France being present at the important conferences and having neither a voice or even knowledge of the agreements that are being made.

All the decisions regarding Germany's future have practically been settled without France. Germany will be occupied exclusively by Russia, the United States and Great Britain, and the use of German ports by American troops will make "the American Army of Occupation quite independent of France or French ports." Thus, France's claims, for reasons of security, to occupation of the Rhine and Ruhr districts, are utterly disregarded before they have ever had a chance to be officially formulated.

This would point to more than "stubborn clinging to the carcasses of dead policies" and would indicate, on the contrary, a very definite if equally stubborn determination to keep France in the position where her betrayal by Vichy and refusal to recognize her rights and her will have put her. She will be admitted as an equal to the Council of the United Nations after it is too late for her to raise her voice in any important issue. J. G.

Dewey's Campaign

I have been puzzled by The Post's failure thus far to mention editorially one of the striking features of this presidential campaign. I find it frankly shocking that a candidate for the highest office in our country should make frequent use of such obviously false and insupportable statements as accusations that the present Administration is riddled with communist supporters, that it intends to keep soldiers in the Army to escape the need of providing jobs, that it is committed to secret treaties, that it caused the depression, etc. The quoting of statements out of their context and twisting their meaning into something never intended is in the same category. If a candidate will stoop to such dishonest methods in his campaign, how can he be considered fit to hold the office of President?

MRS. J. SHELDON TURNER.

Garrett Park, Md., Oct. 17.

Your editorial "Dewey's Mixture" of October 18, is a well deserved rebuke of the demagogic campaigning of Governor Dewey, who has begun to conduct his campaign in a way which a great number even of Republican voters resent. By repeating the false accusation that President Roosevelt prefers to keep the boys in the Army instead of trying to get jobs for them, Mr. Dewey applies one of Hitler's methods, who believes in influencing people by repeating the untruth. You mention correctly that General Hershey's declaration cleared the situation. The communistic boogie has also been led ad absurdum by you. You are afraid Mr. Dewey's statements might undermine the morale of some members of our armed forces. It seems to me that that is the worst a candidate's word could achieve. E. F. GRANT.

Peace Settlement

By Mark Sullivan

Forms of Government

GOVERNOR DEWEY, in his speech on foreign relations, made a distinction which has long been recognized in Washington and which, because of Mr. Dewey's emphasis on it may now become more clear to the public. He distinguished between the international organization for preventing future wars, now in the stage of a partial blueprint; and, on the other hand, the peace settlements. By the peace settlements is meant the arrangements about the future of conquered countries, such as Germany, and of liberated countries such as Poland and others, including Italy, which seems to be both a conquered country and a liberated one.

As to the international organization for preventing war, Mr. Dewey heartily approved it. It is this and this only that is covered by the agreement between Mr. Dewey and Mr. Hull that it be kept out of politics. For this agreement and for the progress in all respects, Mr. Dewey gave much praise to Mr. Hull.

But as to America's part in the peace settlements, Mr. Dewey was strongly critical. He said that America's part in the peace settlements is being carried on mainly by President Roosevelt, and that what is being done is not being told to the public. He stressed the Teheran conference at which Mr. Roosevelt negotiated with Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill.

THE PEACE SETTLEMENTS contain one difficulty that goes deep. Whatever is done about Poland and other liberated or conquered countries will strongly influence, or even determine, the form of government and society likely to prevail in those countries in the future. As respects form of government and society, there is a stark cleavage within the group of three governments whose heads are making the peace settlements. The United States and Britain have a form of governmental and social organization which includes freedom of speech and press, freedom of religion, and a parliamentary form of government—that is, government by a legislative body elected by universal suffrage. Russia, on the other hand, has none of these.

In peace settlements looking toward the future of Poland, and other countries, it would be natural that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill should lean toward settlements favorable to the form of government in their countries. Equally it would be natural that Premier Stalin would lean toward his form.

Yet this assumption about Russia encounters a little-noticed fact. Last fall there was a conference at Moscow, not of the three heads of government but of the three foreign secretaries—Mr. Hull for the United States, Mr. Molotov for Russia and Mr. Eden for Britain. This conference took notice of the future of Italy. As to this, the formal report of the conference contained the following:

"The foreign secretaries of the three governments are agreed that the following measures are important and should be put into effect. . . . Freedom of speech, of religious worship, of political belief, of press and of public meetings, shall be restored in full measure to the Italian people."

THIS IS to a large degree a statement of the American and British conception of government. The words are almost identical with those in the Bill of Rights in the American Constitution, and in the British constitution and common law.

How this provision came to be written into the Moscow agreement we do not know. One surmises that it must have been prepared by either Mr. Hull or Mr. Eden, or both. We know—and this is the important point—that Mr. Molotov assented to it as the representative of Russia.

The same problem that underlies the peace settlements may arise in connection with the international organization for preventing war. In preliminary discussions, the countries uniting in this organization are described as the "peace-loving" nations. That phrase is a kind of test for membership. It may turn out difficult to bring about such an organization unless the countries participating in it gravitate toward a large degree of similarity as respects form of government. The practical test may become not only "peace-loving," but also "practicing democratic forms of government."

Sick Leave

The Government Printing Office is denying its employes permission to work on the Saturday when they have taken sick leave during the week.

At the beginning of the war, eight hours additional work on Saturday at time and a half were granted in response to the employes' petition for a wage increase to counter rising living costs. This corresponded to the 21.6 per cent increase received by salaried Federal workers, and to the pay raises received throughout private business and industry.

Since this single day's wage constitutes a considerable portion of the income upon which his household budget is based, an employe is reluctant to forfeit it. Therefore he will attempt to continue at work when he is becoming ill, thereby endangering his own health and exposing others to contagion.

Is this the solution to absenteeism? INTERESTED.

Donlevy Has Ace Role In 'American Romance' On Screen at Palace

IN FORMULATING the pattern of his self-written-produced-and-directed "An American Romance," which opened yesterday on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, King Vidor seems to have been befogged by a slight doubt as to whether it was a romantic drama or a "documentary" that he had hatched after what is reputed to have been years of meditation.

BRIAN DONLEVY

Covering a period only a little short of half a century, the picture is dedicated to the proposition that America—specifically the United States—is the land of opportunity. There can be no quarrel with that. There might be, however, with the static state in which the film frequently finds itself.

The "romantic" interest of the story frequently is bogged down by repetitious action and time out for a peroration or two, or three, as to what it is that constitutes "Americanism" and why it is that this country is the shining hope of all the underprivileged of the world.

Industrialism, necessarily, plays a large part in the saga of an immigrant who landed at Ellis Island without a word of English at his command and then, through a succession of familiar processes became day laborer, foreman of an open hearth steel furnace, inventor of the first steel-topped motor car and finally the presiding genius over a plane plant that turned out four-motored bombers in unprecedented number for the victorious purposes of the present war.

As was remarked, I believe, in some previous column, "An American Romance" bears a trifle too close aresemblance to "The American Way" for complete comfort. There is nothing imitative about it, to be sure, but there is an identity of theme that robs the present exhibit of something of the appeal that it might otherwise have exerted.

Steel Almost Steals It

Despite the fact that the steel industry fairly divides honors with Mr. Vidor's principal characters in the pursuit of a patriotic and inspiring tribute to the constitutional principles that have made America great, there is a great deal in its favor on the human side.

It reflects a warm and sympathetic estimate of typical home life in these more or less United States; it casts a highlight upon the concept that in this country individual initiative is not without its rewards; it even delves superficially into the matter of the controversy between labor and management and has something in common with progress along the way toward the "brotherhood of man," the dignity of the genus homo and the right of every individual to his place in the eternal scheme of things.

I dare say Mr. Vidor had some notion of "social significance" in his mind when he compounded "An American Romance." He did not entirely miss his target. Neither did he entirely encompass the essential item of engrossing entertainment.

"An American Romance" is too long by an exorbitant measure. In its effect, if not in its action, it is monotonously repetitious. The gradual steps by which a lowly fellow reaches the heights, under the benign protection of the Man With the Whiskers, at this point, lacks something of the tang of novelty.

Interesting But Inert

And I doubt that Steve Dangos' search for the solution of the puzzle of how iron ore ever becomes steel—illuminatingly illustrated by a meticulous reproduction of the complicated procedures of the steel plants—belongs anywhere out of a frank and unequivocal documentary.

In his human relationships, however, Steve Dangos was quite a fellow. He married the attractive young woman who taught him English, reared a fine family—one a soldier who lost his life in World War I, one a concert violinist and another a member of his father's manufacturing company whose vision was greater than his dad's.

The Dangos daughter presents her parents with two grandsons who lend the closing sequences of the picture, in the period of the present war, a touch of poignance that will strike close to the consciousness of many spectators.

All of this is executed in Technicolor with a skill that imparts a high degree of realism to the least, as well as the most, impressive of the expensive scenes in which the film abounds.

Mr. Vidor may have created a slightly trite epic of what it is that makes America the goal of every man of whatever nationality, color or creed with a lust for freedom in his soul, but there can be no squabbling with the quality of his direction. It is consistently top-shelf.

Donlvey at His Best

In the principal role of Steve Dangos, Brian Donlevy turns in one of his most rounded and best balanced performances. As an exponent of what has been termed "rugged individualism," his portrayal of the immigrant is robust, gentle and adamant, by turns. He was a pretty good guy—as most Americans are.

Complementing the star's performance with one of equal merit is Ann Richards, an Australian actress new to American audiences—at least to these eyes and ears. Miss Richards, as Anna, the schoolteacher, who becomes Mrs. Dangos early in the proceedings, is a player of charm, complete naturalness and conspicuous competence.

In supporting roles, those who will be most vividly remembered are Walter Abel, as the administrative partner in the Dangos enterprises; John Qualen, the cousin who gets his cousin his first job on the handle end of a shovel, and Horace McNally, who turns in an able and believable depiction of the son who battles his father on matters of labor organization and recognition.

There are a host of others who participate in the goings-on, most of them to the high advantage of the film.

As we were saying, "An American Romance" is too long. By reason of that fact the picturized "News of the Day" is the bill's only auxiliary.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

TOM DEWEY finally developed the FDR knack of relaxing while he campaigns. He has now traveled close to 8000 miles to make six speeches, finds he can do a lot of quiet thinking on trains, prefers to make a speech, then get back to Albany for important strategy talks.

Dewey's special car on the campaign train is named the David Livingstone." He sleeps soundly in a large compartment, Mrs. Dewey occupying a room adjacent. En route to make his St. Louis speech, however, Dewey did not sleep so soundly. Feeling a piece of metal under his pillow, he turned on the lights, found some wag had pinned an FDR putton under it.

The Dewey routine on his special train seldom varies. He rises at 8:30 a. m., eats exactly the same kind of breakfast—fruit juice, toast and coffee, as at Albany. Mrs. Dewey, garrulous, boyish-looking Paul Lockwood and Elliot Bell, State superintendent of banks and key ghost-writing aid to the Governor, usually join him.

Meals are prepared by a special chef in the private car, are served at a neat, teakwood table seating four persons, which can be enlarged to hold at least eight dinners. Dewey's own waiter accompanies him.

Dewey hates fish, eats red meat only once a week, enjoying fowl and vegetables the rest of the time. He is a good eater, licks his plate clean, does no drinking while out campaigning. Other times, he enjoys a highball or two before and after dinner, smokes cigarettes through a long FDR like, silver-finished holder.

Likes His Popcorn

AFTER DINNER, the Dewey chef reached up to a shelf, pulls down a box of unpopped corn, pops it fresh over a charcoal burner. All evening while working Dewey munches popcorn, ordering up a new warm batch now and then, consumes about a box every three days, likes it dipped heavily in butter—although he worries about his weight. For variety, Dewey munches potato chips, sips at ginger ale or mineral water.

Inside the Dewey car, RCA has loaded a magnificent amplifying set, radio and listening equipment. Through these, Dewey tunes in on newscasts, likes to listen to good music en route. He also has a telephone in his car, which is connected at lengthy stops, in order to contact GOP headquarters in Albany or New York City.

Dewey still makes few back-platform speeches, even if crowds congregate in the rear of his car. When he does speak, two huge amplifiers mounted over the back end of the platform carry his words to the crowd. Dewey used to survey his audience, always started by saying: "Doesn't look like there's a New Dealer in the crowd." But he has stopped this after being booed by Roosevelt supporters on several occasions.

Only two of the nine cars on the Dewey train are paid for by the Republican National Committee. The other nine carry about 70 correspondents from all over the country, with an occasional foreign correspondent anxious to tell the folks overseas what Dewey looks and sounds like. They pay their own way, as they also do with Roosevelt.

Avoids Station Crowds

DEWEY IS still anxious to avoid the appearance of barnstorming, as did Landon and Willkie. Therefore cuts down on impromptu talks, keeps them at a minimum. To help do this, Dewey has ordered train routes kept secret, hopes to keep station crowds down. However, occasionally crowds yell so loudly the Governor and Mrs. Dewey go out, take a bow. At one recent stop the crowd numbered several thousand. However, Dewey, not yet dressed, wouldn't make an appearance. In 1940, Willkie, slung a bathrobe over his shoulders, appeared several times hair tousled, waving gaily to crowds regardless of their size, despite warnings of his physician against early morning stops.

Unlike the Willkie train, which was hectic, often chaotic, the Dewey train runs like a well geared machine. Newsmen do no tearing of their hair worrying over advance copies of speeches. Releases are ready at least six hours before delivery time. Dewey sticks very closely to the prepared text, practices his speeches several times for the benefit of his campaign cabinet before each appearance.

Keeps to His Text

IN 1940, Willkie frequently worked until the last minute over his speeches, sometimes changed the text with numerous impromptu remarks as he went along. Result was correspondents found covering Willkie a nightmare, consider Dewey very tame. Dewey has also studiously avoided another Willkie habit, giving away the theme of his forthcoming speeches in day-time talks to small audiences. Willkie frequently did this, sometimes expressed himself better in the early part of the day when his voice was good, than he did at night before impressive radio networks.

The Governor's wife seems to enjoy the campaign trips, works at being unobtrusive, staying out of her husband's way. At stops, Mrs. Dewey greets local Republican women, is always accompanied by Irene Kuhn or Anne Wheaton of the GOP National Committee Staff. Mrs. Dewey makes no speeches, expresses no views, and Republican strategists emphasize this in order to capitalize on the controversial character of Mrs. Roosevelt. Mrs. Dewey, they insist, is a homebody.

Dewey rarely leaves his private car during trips, makes only occasional forays to visit the press, but plays hard at being a hail-fellow-well-met. The bulk of the correspondents still dislike Dewey, thing him stuffy, say he never unbends, looks like he is acting a role in a drama night and day. Two best Dewey efforts to unbend thus far came when he played a round of poker, one night, in the press car, and when he wandered into the lounge with his entourage and was wheedled into singing several campaign songs.

Campaign Train Song

THE DEWEY CAMPAIGN train has its own theme song, "The Saga of E. A. Wells," sung to the tune of the immortal railroad song, "Casey Jones." E. A. Wells was the engineer of the Dewey special during the wreck which occurred on the Governor's West Coast speaking tour.

Correspondents aboard Dewey train who have rebelled at wearing huge buttons, which make them look like members of the Republican National Committee, now have a way of getting even. . . . In small towns, spectators seeing the buttons rush up to newsmen, ask how the campaign is going, are dismayed when reporters who look like GOP officials, say it looks "very bad, very tough for our man up there," pointing to Dewey . . . Dewey holds no press conerences in Albany any more, does not see the press from week to week . . . Since the campaign picked up speed, Dewey rarely even appears at the executive chambers, does all his work at the ugly, bulking executive mansion in Albany . . . No list of callers is given out daily as by the White House. Result is, few know who Dewey sees or what they talked about.

Broadway Bulletins

New York, Oct. 19.—The President has decided to campaign. He will make a tour, speak at public meetings, ride in parades and make rear - platform speeches from the train which will take him to the various places which will be announced by the White House. He has concluded that he must overcome some of the apathy of the electorate, and discredit the rumors being spread by the opposition . . . And if he should be confronted with his statement of last summer, that he would not campaign in the usual partisan sense, he will reply that this tour is for the purpose of correcting misrepresentations and falsehoods.

CLARE BOOTHE LUCE

The Swedish Ambassador in Washington has received word that his country stopped the shipment of ballbearings to Germany, as of October 12 . . . Gen. Robert E. Wood, former head of the America First Committee, has returned from his long round-the-world tour for the Army . . . A new radio network will be announced shortly . . . Dorothy Thompson, the only member of the Roosevelt camp who was able to lick Clare Boothe Luce, is warming up again. Miss Thompson will make a series of radio speeches . . . F. P. A., whose mustache is older than Tom Dewey, wrote to the Governor and offered an election bet—loser to shave off his mustache.

Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, producers of John Patrick's "The Hasty Heart," have had the play only three weeks. Nobody else, except the cast, has seen the script, yet two film companies have entered bids for the movie rights. One bid is over $150,000 . . . The odds now are that before November 6 the Gallup Poll will predict a victory for Dewey. This will be capitalized upon for the bandwagon voters . . . 94 national organizations, such as the Bar Association, DAR, Americans United, American Legion, CIO, AFL, etc., will be brought to Washington this week and the State Department will tell them about the Dumbarton Oaks Conference.

Archbishop Spellman or Maginnis, the Boston architect, will be named by the President to succeed Alfred E. Smith as the American representative on the committee to protect Europe's historical and religious monuments . . . John Steinbeck was asked to describe the cries of his infant son, Thom. "A baby's cry," was Steinbeck's description, "is like the sound of a rusty hinge" . . . Mrs. Dwight Morrow says that just as her husband did she's voting the straight Republican ticket . . . John Chamberlain's new project is the biography of Adolph Ochs. Ambassador Claude Bowers tried it once, but it just didn't jell.

Count Carlo Sforza, who was Foreign Minister of Italy before Mussolini took office, is back in Rome now, where he tells this story of his exile: Sforza fled from Italy to the French Riviera. Every day it was his custom to sit on a bench near the shore of the Mediterranean, and stare at the sea, toward the land where his forebears had settled countless generations ago and from which he now was exiled. An Italian industrialist he'd known for many years was vacationing on the Riviera. The industrialist sat down beside Sforza, mentioned Il Duce, and confessed: "Sforza, I wish I had my strikes back."

George Jessel, producer of "The Dolly Sisters," will have Milton Berle in the picture. Jessel saw Berle at the Stork Club last week and discussed the movie with him. "This part you gave me—is it a good one?" asked Berle. Producer Jessel assured him: "Don't be silly. If it were a good part, wouldn't I be playing it myself?" . . . The Duchess of Windsor was at a Long Island party where she heard one of the guests making cruel jests about Eleanor Roosevelt. The Duchess told the guest: "One of us must leave" . . . Fala, the White House Scottie, is engaged. The bride-to-be is Rubev, a Scottie owned by Paul Porter's daughter.

The United States Supreme Court affirmed the constitutionality of the law which I introduced and had passed in Albany, the law preventing theater owners from arbitrarily barring newspapermen or anyone else they might dislike . . . The Hays office will be fought on its ban against Kathleen Winsor's "Forever Amber." The movie rights will be sold . . . During the invasion of France the cruiser "Augusta," which stayed in the assault area longer than any other ship, helped the British cruiser "Aurora" destroy a Riviera resort which was being used as Nazi headquarters. That night at the Admiral's conference, Commander Jess Phares of the "Augusta" met the skipper of the "Aurora," who discussed the hotel they destroyed and added: "I spent my honeymoon at that hotel."

Mert Wertheimer, former owner of the Royal Palms, will return to the Miami scene, reopening the Little Palms, where he will pay Joe E. Lewis $4500 a week. Lewis once worked for Wertheimer, asked $1250 a week and agreed to take $1000. He was so successful that at the end of the week he found $1250 in his envelope. "Mert, you made a mistake," said Lewis, returning the $250. "No, you did," said the cafe owner, spurning the refund.

Big Pay Bills Seen GI Urge To Craps Games' Large Stakes

By the Associated Press

The size of stakes in army crap games became an economic issue yesterday, as if it already weren't.

Spang in the middle of a scholarly discussion of Allied military currency used by our army in Italy, Economists Donald L. Kemmerer and T. Eugene Beattie observed that the soldiers customarily are handed their pay in the biggest bills available "and incidentally stakes in crap games are kept high."

"To keep transportation costs to a minimum our soldiers are generally paid in the largest denomination possible" the economists stated in a folder distributed by the Economists' National Committee on monetary policy.

"Command Invitation"

"For example, a soldier entitled to 46.50 on pay day will get four 1000-lire notes, one 500-lire note, one 100 and one 50."

It doesn't take an assistant professor of economics, such as Kemmerer is at the University of Illinois, to deduce that this procedure is virtually a command invitation for high rolling on the vagaries of that old eighter from dictator and little Joe from Kokong.

The currency, which Kemmerer and Beattie say looks like cigar coupons lithographer on mediocre paper, is turned out in Washington and shipped to Italy, where it has been declared legal tender. The exchange rate is 100 lire to the dollar, and soldriers with a sense of thrift, a smart pair of dice, or both, frequently convert the lire to dollar money-orders which the dispatch home after the pay day flurries.

Another Angle

There's another crapshooting angle to the currency situation, Messrs K. and B. declare:

"If it is attempted to redeem money in full for American soldiers there arise possibilities, difficult to deal with, of soldiers buying native-held Allied military currency at a discount and making a profit.

"Who is to say that a GI turning up with a wad of bills did not win them at a crap game?"

Proposal to Weld Liberty Bell Introduces a Ringing Debate

Right in the midst of election battling plopped another hot issue for Congress yesterday—should the crack in the Liberty Bell be welded?

"Never," said Senator Reynolds (D., N. C.) "It should be left as it is in its sacred cloister."

"Why not?" asked Representative Disney (D., Okla.) "It seems a good idea to me. "We lead a radio life nowadays and to have its ringing heard over the air would keep the youngsters reminded of the fact there is an old Liberty Bell. If it has a voice it should be heard."

The suggestion that the bell be reparied came from W. J. Conley, consulting engineer for the Lincoln Eelectric Co., Cleveland. In a letter to Speaker Sam Rayburn, Conley said a study "indicates full tone can be restored to the Liberty Bell by arc welding."

Nothing official can be done about Conley's idea until Congress reconvenes November 14, but indications are that debate will ring lo nder than the old bell did when it cracked in 1835.

The bell has long been enshrined in an honored resting place in Independence Hall, Philadelphia.

Lining up with Reynolds, Senator Johnson (D., Colo.), said "the Liberty Bell is a symbol and there are some sacred things we ought not to tinker with."

Agreeing, Representative Cole (R., N. Y.), said he believed the significance of the Liberty Bell in American history could best be continued by leavign it as it is.

At Philadelphia, Mayor Bernard Samuel said: "It belongs to 130,000,000 Americans and I wouldn't want to tinker with it without getting the consent of the nation and theopinion of the best authorities."

Depleted U. S. Stock of Shoes Threatens to Reduce Ration

By Christine Sadler

Shoe stocks have gone down so rapidly during the war they are now below an adequate working inventory level and maintaining the present ration rate of two pairs a year until production can catch up will be "a job," the Office of Price Administration and the War Production Board said yesterday in a joint statement.

An inventory of about 183000,000 pairs is needed to make different types and sizes available throughout the country, it was said, but stocks on July 31 were down to approximately 170717,000 pairs. A stockpile of 250,000,000 was available when rationing went into effect, indicating that the ration rate which started out at three pairs a year and dropped o two may prove too high if V-E Day is pushed much more into the future.

New Stamp Valid November 1

"With a new stamp becoming valid on November 1, we are carrying on the six-month ration rate for the present," OPA said. "Together with the stamps now in use, it will remain valid indefinitely."

"Looking at the new supply side of the picture, there is no cause for optimism as yet. Over-all production of rationed-type shoes for civilians during the first six months of this year amounted to 134,065,000 pairs, compared to the 154,125,000 pairs produced in the first six months of 1943—which was also short of needs."

Before the war Americans bought shoes at a rate of 500 million pairs annually.

Children's Sizes Scarcest

Stocks are especially short on shoes for infants and children, it was pointed out, and this in spite of progress made in increasing production in these lines. Inventories during the year declined 38 per cent for infant shoes, 22 per cent for misses and children, 23 per cent for women, 15.9 per cent for boys, 14 per cent for men's work shoes, and 11.8 per cent for men's dress shoes.

WPB and its Office for Civilian Requirements will continue their efforts to increase production of small-sized shoes, the statement said.

OBA Group Named To Help Veterans

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Appointment of a committee of the American Bankers Association to study the needs of war veterans was announced today by W. Randolph Burgess, new ABA president.

Headed by Chester R. Davis, vice president of the Chicago Title & Trust Co., the committee's chief function will be to provide "the necessary information on and understanding" of the problems of the returning veterans. Its members come from 19 States.

They All Want to Act!

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 19.—Arthur Schwartz, instead of having trouble getting folks for Cole Porter's "Night and Day," tells me it's just the reverse.

All the people who were made into stars through Cole's songs want to be in it. And gosh! What a list! There's Mary Martin, who wants to sing "My Heart Belongs to Daddy"; Ethel Merman, "I Get a Kick Out of You"; Jimmy Durante, "A Little Skipper from Heaven Above"; Fred Astaire, "Night and Day"; Sophie Tucker, "Some Gentlemen Don't Like Love"; June Knight, "Begin the Beguine"; Irene Bordoni, "Let's Do It"; William Gaxton, "You're the Tops"; Clifton Webb and Victor Moore. But the only one signed so far who's never appeared in a Cole Porter picture or song is Cary Grant. He'll sing in this . . . Arthur took Michael Curtiz and two writers to New York, and in seven days there, slept in seven different beds. They were moved from a maid's room to the Edward Windsor suite for 24 hours, then back to maid's room again . . . Curtiz, talking script with Cole, said, "In this part, Cole, you struggle—as you did in cheap vaudeville when you were with Franchot Tone. Now, in this scene, Cole, you stick to your purpose, come hell or hayride!" What a character!

Note from Barara Hutton in San Francisco: "Having wonderful time." But she didn't add "wish you were here" . . . Instead of autographing Buddy de Sylva's copy of "Lost in the Horse Latitudes," Allen Smith signed the name of "Button Gwinnett," whose signature is worth a fortune. He was one of the signers of the Constitution. It seems he never wrote letters, so his autographs are scarce and bring top prices . . . . Eddie Mannix and Sam Wood huddling. Why wouldn't Mannix want him to do a picture for Metro? Look what came out of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" . . . James Warren, who has been at Metro for two years, is being tested for the Gary Cooper picture . . . Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's enemies are saying Geraldine Fitzgerald was much too beautiful for the part. Her friends are saying Geraldine wasn't pretty enough. But Mrs. Wilson is so delighted she wrote Darryl Zanuck a fan letter . . . Adrian's making Ilka Chase's clothes for her play, "In Bed We Cry."

Never Too Old

Arthur Treacher's 81-year-old mother is an airplane spotter in London. She was the oldest woman to volunteer for that service . . . Peter Lawford's parents are acting in "The Suspect" for Universal . . . Lunching with Margaret O'Brien the other day, I asked her if she had seen "Meet Me in St. Louis" yet. She said no. I asked: "Don't you like to see your own pictures?" "No," replied Margaret. "You see, I already know the stories of pictures I've been in, so there's no suspense" . . .

This and That

William Perlberg backed up his praise of Director George Seton by bidding for his play, "Out of This World," which ran on Broadway. He wants it for next season. Perlberg tells me he has no more difficulty with Betty Grable. She was having nurse trouble. How can a gal work when she's worried about her baby? Now she not only has a good nurse, but the studio has provided a stand-by . . . Gladys Cooper loaded up her station wagon with servicemen and took them to San Diego for the opening of "The Doll's House" in which her husband, Philip Merivale, appears with Francis Lederer and Jane Darwell

LUSTY WIND FOR CAROLINA
By INGLIS FLETCHER
Author of Raleigh's Eden
From Hanoverian England to the shores of the Carolina colonies sweeps this drama of the fight for freedom on the high seas of the New World. Against this brilliant backdrop of history the fascinating characters spring to tumultuous life—Gabrielle Fountaine, in love with her father's bondsman; bold Captain Woodes Rogers; Anne Bonney, the seductively beautiful pirate queen. Inglis Fletcher has fashioned once again a rich, full-bodied story that moves with the rush of a ship, its sails filled with a fresh, free wind. $3.00

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

More Work for U. S. Than Payrolls Indicate

Bureaucracy is a leading political issue. It's fashionable to denounce bureaucracy and the bureaucrats. It's a sure thing for cheers. No one has had the courage to raise his voice in defense of the three million civilians who work for Uncle Sam. It would be most unpopular, even to the employes themselves. But a splendid case can be made for the size of the Federal Government . . . that it is, indeed, quite small. Further, that the number of people the Civil Service Commission says is employed by Uncle Sam is, in reality, a meaningless figure. The number could well be 10, 15 or 25 millions. And it would be more accurate.

KLUTTZ

The Navy offers a graphic example. It has about 700,000 civilians who represent about 23 per cent of the total civilians who draw Government pay checks. About half of these people work in the nine Navy yards that have built or converted 1088 combatant, mine, patrol, auxiliary, landing and district craft in the past four years. But these Navy civilians built only 1.67 per cent of the 65,015 vessels constructed at all yards. In other words, more than 98 per cent of the ships were built by privately owned and operated yards . . . yards whose entire output is contracted for in advance by the Navy . . . whose very existence is dependent upon the Navy, and whose employes are paid with funds that come directly from the U. S. Treasury. Instead of 1.67 per cent, the Navy, perhaps, could have put up a logical argument as to why it should build 10, 15, 25 per cent or more of the ships. It could have had several times its present number of employes.

Navy employes made the tough ships, the big battleships, cruisers, destroyers, etc. They have put out 279 combatant ships, or about 28 per cent of the total construction in that class and 967 of the 1088 vessels were of new construction. In dollar value, the cost of construction at navy yards is in excess of $2,300,000,000, or about 17 per cent of the over--all program, which amounted to $13,900,000,000. And the Navy torpedo stations—one is at Alexandria—have produced 85 per cent of all the torpedoes purchased by the Navy. This production is valued at 160 million dollars. The Navy must buy two of every three torpedoes it uses from private plants. The Navy just as easily could have produced all the torpedoes it needs by operating the private plants. It would have meant a few thousand more civilians on the payrolls.

Down at the Washington Navy Yard—at the gun factory—all naval guns of 3 inches and more are assembled, tested and proofed. Also, a large number of the mounts and turrets are constructed for the guns. This operation, just as easily, could have been placed under private contract and Navy could have reported a few thousands fewer employes. But the cost would have been the same, or more. And at Philadelphia, the naval aircraft factory, which is engaged mainly in experimental work, has produced 1298 aircraft in the past four years, about 2 per cent of its needs. Civilian employes at the ammunition depots have loaded over 40 million rounds of shells valued at more than 750 million dollars, and civilians at the powder factory have produced about 15 million dollars' worth of explosives annually. The Marine Corps has a depot which has turned out about 50 million dollars' worth of clothing since Pearl Harbor, and the Navy depot in Brooklyn has produced 15 million garments in the past two years.

That, in a nutshell, is the picture of Navy bureaucracy. It clearly shows that the figure of 700,000 civilians employed by the Navy is absolutely meaningless . . . it isn't even a clear indication of the vast amount of manpower it requires to carry on the fleet. The figure might well be 50,000 or 100,000 if the Navy policy was to contract for all services. The civilian figure could be cut down even more by placing more men and women in uniform in civilian jobs. Then the record would have shown very few civilians on the payroll and apparently some people would have accepted this as foolproof evidence that Navy was running the war efficiently and economically.

On the other hand, Navy could have insisted on making all its ships, planes, torpedoes, ammunition and the like, and instead of having 700,000 civilians it would have several millions. But the department adopted a policy of making only a small percentage of the things it needs. After you get this picture, don't you agree that it is strange that these 700,000 Navy civilians, like all other Government workers, are denounced as bureaucrats and wasters. These people are damned while their colleagues who work in the private shipyards and factories that are making war materiel for the Navy are praised. The salaries for these two groups come from the same place—the U. S. Treasury. The Federal workers are paid directly by Government check. One big Government check goes to the private contractor and he pays his employes out of it. And to carry it back another step, it all comes from our pockets.

Md. Aspirants Step Up Pace; Rallies Listed

By the Associated Press

With the general election little more than three weeks away, the Maryland political struggle warmed up yesterday as candidates and speakers scrambled for the votes that many observers believed would be an important factor to the national campaign outcome.

As one of the so-called border States, Maryland was tabbed recently along with Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri and others as the area to watch, in the belief that if President Roosevelt or Governor Dewey can capture them, the political path will end in the White House.

As one indication of the importance attached to the Maryland Eastern Shore by the Democratic National Committee was the announcement that Senator Ernest W. McFarland (D., Ariz.) would be the principal sp eaker at a party rally Friday night in Salisbury. Previously, Representative James W. Fulbright (D., Ark.) had been slated for the Salisbury meeting.

Tydings at Salisbury

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), seeking reelection, and Dudley G. Roe, former State Senator and candidate for Congressman from the first (Eastern Shore) district, also will speak at Salisbury.

Blanchard Randall of Baltimore, the Republican candidate for U. S. Senator, meanwhile continued his swing of western Maryland with a tour of Washington County yesterday. He was to return to Baltimore last night for a meeting with city workers, then head back to Allegany County for a tour Friday, and Garrett County Saturday. Tdyings and Roe scheduled a tour of Somerset County for Saturday.

Galen L. Tait, Republican State Central Committee chairman, appealed Wednesday night for the defeat of the Democratic ticket to end what he termed "the present New Deal era of shameful waste, abuse of power, class divisions, constitutional usurpations and bureaucratic regimentation."

"As Maryland Goes—"

Tait said Maryland had followed suit each time the Nation had gone Republican since 1892, and "we expect this year that Maryland will again go Republican, and again will be the weather vane of national Republican victory."

Governor O'Conor, Tydings and Representative Lansdale Sasscer (D., Md.) addressed a Democratic rally last night at the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club.

Dr. Adam Clayton Powell, jr., Negro Congressman-elect from New York City, told a mass meeting of Baltimore City Negroes Wednesday night that President Roosevelt was "a leader of the people, black and white" and urged his reelection "to maintain a Government that is classless in program, nonracial in philosophy and posessing a world viewpoint."

Ellison on Defense

Representative Daniel Ellison (R., Md.), seeking reelection in the Fourth Maryland District, defended his record in a talk before the Baltimore Federation of Labor, by declaring, "What the hell should I apologize for?"

Ellison, who has been criticized for some of his voting stands in Congress, said that if he were reelected, "I can state here and now that in every single fundamental respect, national condition; remaining the same, I would vote the same as I did in the Seventieth Congress."

Witness Tells Of Mysterious Blasts in Bay

Dundalk, Md., Oct. 19 (AP).—Harry Cantwell, a Dundalk fireman, told today of witnessing two terrific explosions which forced water up many feet into the air and killed hundreds of fish at a point between Millers Island and Craighill Light in Chesapeake Bay.

He expressed the belief that the blasts may have been caused by submerked mines or stray shells fired from the Aberdeen Proving Ground, although the place where the explosions occurred was outside the Aberdeen firing area.

The fireman said he was cruising in his 16-foot runabout when there was a loud blast and a geyser of water rose to a height of about 20 feet about 500 yards in front of him. A few minutes afterwards the water was filled with dead fish.

The boats seams were sprung by the blasts, he related.

A similar explosion occurred about 15 minutes later, about 1000 yards from the first, Cantwell related. He added he had heard a blast and seen evidence of such an explosion only eight days before in about the same region of the bay.

Ft. Meade Plans Exhibit Tonight

Fort Meade, Md., Oct. 19 (Spl.).—A two-hour demonstration of weapons of the Chemical Warfare Service will be staged here tomorrow night for post personnel and visitors.

Flame throwers, incendiary bombs, grenades, shells and mines will be employed in the exhibition, beginning at 7 p. m. In addition to the ready made devices, improvised chemical weapons will be demonstrated, including the famous Molotov cocktail.

Also on view will be the colored smokes used for signaling, the deadly white phosphorus and mines spreading simulated gases. Bleachers will be erected for the spectators, and Lieut. Donald M. Telford, post Chemical Warfare officer, will deliver a running commentary on the exhibition over a public address system.

Camp Detrick Suit Will Be Continued

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—Arguments will be presented tomorrow in Federal Court in a condemnation suit involving 97 acres of land belonging to Austin K. Thomas of Frederick and sought by the Government for expansion of Camp Detrick.

Several witnesses testified today in the case, which involves Thomas' request for a rental of $1200 for the land. He had been offered $775 to $1000, plus $1,775-$1800 for his crops.

The land was condemned under the National Emergency Act February 2, 1944.

Norfolk Navy Yard Gets New Commandant

Portsmouth, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—Rear Admiral Carl Henry Jones, USN, today took over command of the Norfolk Navy Yard, succeeding Rear Admiral Felix X. Gygax, USN, who has been assigned to duty as commandant of the First Naval District, with headquarters in Boston.

A color guard stood at attention as each admiral read his orders, and a band played before and after the change of command took place. Admiral Jones came to the yard from sea duty. Admiral Gygax leaves the yard after more than three years as commandant.

Randolph Tours Towns in Drive For Reelection

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 19 (Spl.). — Congressman Jennings Randolph, Democrat, seeking reelection from this (second district, brought his speaking campaign to the Eastern Panhandle this week, with public meetings in Moorefield, Monday night, Keyser, Tuesday night, Romney last night, and Charles Town tonight. In all these appearances he has shared the platform with Clarence Meadows, party nominee for governor.

Tomorrow night Congressman Randolph will speak at Marlinton. The same afternoon he speaks at Webster Springs at the opening of the Pocahontas County-Richmond Highway, a non-political meeting he said, and Saturday afternoon a similar non-political gathering of teachers of Randolph County at Elkins. He said he would speak on the Federal role in road building at the Webster Springs gathering. He is a member of the House Roads Committee.

He plans to speak here later in the month at a political meeting, he said.

Autograph Collects To Talk in Winchester

Winchester, Va., Oct. 19.—Marshall Farmer, champion autograph collector, will be guest speaker Friday night at the bimonthly meeting of the Winchester Quota Club. Farmer, who is employed in Washington, has more than 1000 autographs including those of the late Al Smith and Wendell Willkie. Last summer he made a tour of six States for MGM and the Treasury Department.

Coronation of Apple Queen To Highlight Albemarle Fete

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 19.—Young women representing 20 Virginia colleges and junior Colleges will be princesses in the court of Miss Adelina Copello, daughter of the Dominican ambassador to the United States, when she is crowned Miss Albemarle II at the Apple Festival Ball, to be held in Memorial Gymnasium at the University of Virginit tomorrow night.

The ball, under the sponsership of the local Exchange Club, promises to exceed in splendor the one given by the same club two years ago when Senorita Christina Michels, daughter of the Chilean ambassador was crowned Miss Albermarle I.

Miss Copello will be crowned Miss Albermarle II by Virginius Shackelford of Orange, a member of the university's board of visitors. Following the ceremony, she will open the dance with her escort, Ensign George McAfee, former gridiron star at Duke.

Accompanied by her mother and sister "Miss Albemarle" will arrive here at noon tomorrow. The trio is to be escorted by members of the Exchange Club to Gallison Hall, the home of Dr. and Mrs. Julio Suarez Galban, who will honor them at a luncheon. During the afternoon the coronation ceremony will be rehearsed with the twenty co-eds.

Following a cocktail and dinner party, in Alumni Hall, twenty members of the Virginia State Guard in colonial uniforms of the Monticello Guard, will form an official military escort for the queen.

John H. Titus, 97, Marries; 'Author' Of Famous Parody

Elkton, Md., Oct. 19 (AP).—John Henry Titus, 97-year-old claimant to the authorship of "The Face on the Barroom Floor," was honeymooning today—for the third time.

Titus and the former Miss Elizabeth Pfeiderer, 54, were married yesterday at this one-time Gretna Green by the Rev. William Hopkins, who says he deals in antiques as a side line.

The couple gave New York addresses and left immediately for New York by bus, the Methodist minister said.

Titus, who insists he wrote the much parodied old saloon ballad inspired by a face drawn in the Pine Tavern, Jefferson, Ohio, says he was born in a wing of the same tavern.

The Rev. Mr. Hopkins said the tall guant man with the long white hair described himself only as a retired writer and widower, and the clergyman added:

"If Mr. Titus is the oldest person I have ever married, he also is the best preserved."

Boy, 11, Plunges 4 Floors in Shaft, Then Climbs Cable

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—Eleven-year-old Jimmy Wolfe was treated in Mercy Hospital today for a compound fracture and multiple lacerations—all because he wanted to show his 4-year-old cousin how the Baltimore baseball team hits the ball.

Jimmy, who wants to play with the Orioles some day, hit a ball onto the roof of a warehouse next door to his house yesterday and started to retrieve it.

He jumped from the roof of his home to the warehouse skylight, and fell four floors into a roofless elevator which had been stopped for the night. His face bleeding profusely and a bone protruding from his right leg, Jimmy dragged himself to the front door of the building and found it locked.

Making his way painfully back to the elevator, he clambered upon the superstructure and then pulled himself up the cable, hand over hand.

He was found on the roof by his mother.

Voting Status Of Ex-Soldiers Clarified in Va.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—Attorney General Abram P. Staples has rendered a double-barreled legal opinion expected to clarify understanding of qualifications of discharged soldiers to vote in the forthcoming election.

The opinion, rendered in response to a query from Hugh B. Marsh, Commonwealth's attorney at Fairfax, follows lines of one recently rendered by the attorney general in a question from Washington County concerning payment of the poll tax by discharged service personnel, that servicemen discharged subsequent to May 6 may vote without paying the poll tax.

In the opinion rendered yesterday, Mr. Staples ruled that if they were discharged prior to October 7 they cannot vote unless they registered as civilians.

Mr. Staples pointed out that Section 21 of the Constitution provides that poll taxes must be paid six months prior to the date of the election as a condition of voting, but that Section 20, dealing with registration, "provides only that the required poll taxes be paid," either on the day of registration or before.

Persons still in service and at home on election day may go to their polling places and vote without bothering about the poll tax or registration, Mr. Staples said. Should a service voter cast the ballot in person and it develops he had previously mailed in a service ballot, it will be up to local election officials to eliminate one, the attorney-general said.

He further ruled that a person still in the service who was actually at home before the close of registration books is not required to register under the War Voters Acts.

RFC Baring Of War Plant List Deplored

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—Apprehension that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's announced plan to sell or lease Government-owned war plants would further disturb the labor situation by causing an exodus of workers was expressed today by a number of Baltimore industrialists.

The Baltimore businessmen operate facilities provided by the Defense Plant Corp. at a cost exceeding 25 million dollars.

The RFC said in Washington that the plan to sell or lease the properties would hinge upon present contracts and the length of time the plants would continue in wartime manufacture.

However, Baltimore manufacturers, confident that the properties would not be "sold over our heads," claimed that the announcement was premature and that it would interfere with war production by causing an exodus of in-migrant workers.

Arthur Wadsworth, vice president of Revere Copper and Brass Inc., operators of a new eight million dollar DPC plant, reported that the announcement was the "first news I have had that the plant facilities are up for sale. . . . We are up to our ears in vital war production now (and) what we are going to do in the postwar period is a problem we have not yet solved."

One industrialist said he was "sure this list of properties to be sold, including our own, was pulled out of an envelope marked 'not to be opened until the day the war ends.'"

DPC soldings for disposal in Maryland comprise 17 properties.

Va. Shipyard to Build Nine Soviet Turbines

Newport News, Va., Oct. 19 (AP). Contract to build nine 100,000-horsepower hydraulic turbines, to be installed on the Dnieper River at Dnieprostroi in Russia, has been awarded the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co.

Announcement of the award was made yesterday by company officials, and the new turbines will replace machinery built by the Newport News company in 1929 and 1932, and which were destroyed by the Russians in 1941 to prevent them from falling into the hands of invading German armies.

Boy Dies, 2 Badly Hurt As Fire Razes Va. Home

Norton, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—Stacy Mullins, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Mullins, was burned to death early yesterday when the Mullins' home, 1 mile from Pound, was destroyed by fire.

Mrs. Mullins was badly burned about the feet and suffered a bad leg cut while another son, Harold, on leave from the Navy, received bad burns on a leg.

Last Liberty Ship Slides Off Md. Ways

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—Something seemed to be missing tonight at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard after the SS. Samar, the 384th and final Liberty ship built at the Baltimore shipyard, was launched during a rousing community war fund rally attended by moving picture stars, Miss America of 1944 and almost 10,000 others.

A Baltimore war mother, Mrs. Elsie Alexander, who has six sons serving overseas and one in training in this country, smashed the champagne bottle christening the Samar, which will be turned over to the U. S. Navy and converted into a naval auxiliary.

She inadvertently cracked the bottle against the hull about 30 seconds before the Samar began its slide, and champagne spray specked the coats of Venus Ramey of Washington, D. C., Miss America, and Jean Parker of the films.

Miss Parker, Miss Ramey and Bert Wheeler, screen and stage comedian; Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin of Baltimore and others had addressed the crowd of shipyard workers and friends just previously, encouraging support of the war fund, and praising employes for their contribution to the war effort.

J. M. Willis, Fairfield vice president and general manager, estimated that 16,000 yard employes heard the program, either by attending or through loudspeaker systems.

The yard used 16 ways for Liberty ships, but two now have been removed to make way for outfitting piers for the new Victory ships that are being built at Fairfield. The Victory ship, faster and of more durable construction, will be used for postwar commercial trade as well as for shipping materials to the world's fighting fronts.

Pollution Again Noted in Monocacy

Frederick, Md., Oct. 19 (Spl.). The Monocacy River has been polluted the fourth time since last July 15 by the Frederick City sewerage disposal plant, Game Warden Benjamin F. Phebus reported today. The warden said he saw hundreds of game and forage fish dead and floating down the river from the site of the disposal plant to Jug Bridge a mile away.

Local sporsmen this week suggested to the city that the present primary plant be remodeled to treat all sewage. A committee from the Frederick County Fish and Game Association is endeavoring to have the War Department build an addition to the municipal plant rather than erect a new disposal depot for Camp Detrick north of the local installation.

It is generally agreed that the pollution is originating at Camp Detrick and the city disposal plant is not properly equipped to handle the waste.

Welfare Cost Up 4% in Maryland

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Maryland Department of Public Welfare reported today that public assistance of all types except aid to dependent children was 4.2 per cent higher in September, 1944, than in September, 1943.

The total amount paid for all types of assistance was $610,377 as compared to the $585,827 of the 1943 month. A decrease of $14,705 was seen in the report for money incurred for aid to dependent children when $99,450 was spent in September, 1944, as compared to the $114,155 spent in the corresponding 1943 period.

Frederick Shows Republican Gain

Predominantly Democratic Frederick County's complete registration figures for the November 7 election showed yesterday the first definite Republican trend in new voters in 20 years, election officials said.

The GOP gained in 3 of the 60 precincts for a net registration increase of 452 over 1942. Total Democratic registration was 15,575; Republican, 12,746.

Anne Arundel Count, meanwhile, reported a 1944 total registration of 40,904, compared to 1940's 35,515. Election officials said that party affiliations had not yet been tabulated.

Va. Educators' Unit Opposes Fund Freezing

Richmond, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—The Virginia Education Association's policies commission, which met here yesterday, has gone on record as opposing the freezing of the State's Literary Fund.

The resolution to put this constitutional change into effect will be voted on in the general election November 7.

The commission stated it recognizes the worthiness of Governor Darden's proposal to use the Literary Fund excess for teacher retirement needs or for the establishment of a student loan fund, but it added:

"To secure the funds for these worthy purposes at the expense of other equally worthy causes does not constitute educational progress and we must, therefore, go on record as in favor of the continuation of the Literary Fund as it is now constituted and, therefore, in opposition to the proposed constitutional amendment to freeze it at 10 million dollars."

The Literary Fund was established in 1810 at the suggestion of Thomas Jefferson, and is made up of funds paid into the State in fines, escheats, forfeitures, etc. From it, localities may borrow for school building purposes at 2 per cent interest while without it they would be forced to hold elections on bond issues whenever school building funds are needed.

The VEA commission also went on record as favoring (1) that steps be taken toward the "appropriate education of all Virginians"; (2) that action be taken toward the State's assuming control for a continuing supply of competent teachers, and (3) that a balanced program of general and vocational education be developed.

11 Cars of Apples Shipped Abroad From This Area

Waynesboro, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—Officers of an apple company said here today that the first real export shipment of fresh apples since December, 1941, to armed forces in the European area had been sent through an Eastern port of embarkation.

The 11-car shipment contained apples from Waynesboro, Staunton and Winchester areas in Virginia and the Hagerstown (Md.) section. Two were sent from Waynesboro, one from Staunton and eight from the Winchester and Hagerstown sections, it was learned through the Charles I. Keyt Co.

The 11 cars contained 88,000 boxes of apples for uniformed forces overseas.

Ralph E. Trupon, a partner in the local company, said "there may have been a few boxes of apples sent abroad from time to time since the war was declared, but this is the first export shipment in nearly three years in any great quantity."

W. Va. Airman Gets Navy Cross

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 19 (Spl.).—The Navy Cross has been awarded to First Lieut. Franklin C. Thomas, jr., USMC, 24, of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Thomas, sr., according to the Fourth Naval District in Philadelphia where he is now under treatment.

The award is in recognition of his "extraordinary heroism and superior airmanship in the South Pacific area," the announcement said. After flying 41 combat missions over Japanese territory in which he shot down five enemy planes and damaged three others, Lieutenant Thomas was himself shot down near Rabaul by Jap ground fire, bailed out of his plane and was rescued by a PBY.

He is a graduate of the Mercersburg (Pa.) Academy, and during his school years was well known in the sports field as a tennis player.

20% of Md. Soldiers Return Votes to Date

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 19 (AP).—Only 20 per cent of the approximately 115,000 Marylanders of voting age in the armed forces have returned State and Federal absentee ballots to date, August J. Bourbon, executive secretary to Governor O'Conor, reported.

He added that about 1000 ballots daily had been arriving at the Secretary of State's office in the last few days. The legal deadline is 6 p. m. November 7.

A total of 54,000 applications for State votes and about 23,000 returns have been received.

Two Towns Seek Joint Airfield Site

Hancock, Md., Oct. 19 (AP).—The communities of Hancock, Washington County and nearby Berkeley Springs, W. Va., sought today a site for a proposed airfield to be located somewhere between the two towns.

The Hancock Kiwanis Club and the Berkeley Springs Rotary Club announced they would back the proposal as a joint community project. The air strip would be at least one-half mile in length.

Md. Baby Suffocates Under Blanket, Pillow

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—A 3-month-old baby, James Kelly, suffocated under a blanket and pillow at his home, City Patrolman William P. Dukin reported today.

The officer said the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Kelley, related that the pillow was placed on the outside of a couch to prevent the baby from rolling over the side and that they found the infant with a blanket and pillow on top of its head.

Ready for Victory Day

New York (U.P.)—The hour has been set, the hall has been let, and the program is in rehearsal—but the date of this well planned musicale is still a question mark. It will be the night of Germany's surrender. Orchestra director Mark Warnow has engaged Carnegie Hall for his victory concert. The hour will be midnight, to prevent interference with any event scheduled for the hall on that undetermined date.

UNTIL THE JAPS ARE LICKED—
We must keep on saving Used Fats!

DO YOU KNOW why our government had to ask you to save used fats in the first place? It was chiefly because the Japs had taken the Philippines, Java, Malaya . . . the places we used to depend on for a billion pounds of fats and oils every year. Well, the Japs still hold those places . . .

SO, WHEN YOU HEAR good news from European war fronts, remember that those victories don't help our fat shortage problem one bit. In fact, they increase it, for winning victories is a costly business that calls for more and more explosives, tanks, guns, synthetic rubber, soaps, medicines and other war and civilian materials that need fats in the making.

THAT'S WHY your used kitchen fats are needed more than ever. Don't let up yet . . . go right on with the grand job of saving you've been doing for the past two years. Save all scrapings and drippings, and just as soon as the can is full, rush it to your butcher. He will give you 2 free red points and 4¢ for every pound. This is one of the important things you can do toward final victory!

U. S. Casualties Rise 62,000 on Western Front

By the Associated Press

Two months of fighting on the Western Front from the breakthrough on the Normandy Peninsula to the time when German territory was invaded cost about 62,000 casualties among American troops.

This was disclosed yesterday in a War Department announcement that the total American Army casualties for that theater through October 3 were 174,780. An announcement last month by supreme headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force said that the total for western France through August 6 was 112,321.

Total of 29,842 Dead

Of the total casualties from the landing in Normandy on June 6 through October 3, the dead amounted to 29,842, wounded 130,227 and missing 14,711.

An exact comparison of the two casualty announcements, however, was impossible, since the August 6 total included Air Force casualties whereas that covering the period through October 3 did not.

American Army and Navy casualties in all theaters since Pearl Harbor now total 453,375. The War Department reported that through October 6 Army casualties aggregated 384,895. The latest Navy casualty list reports 68,478.

Partly Due to Revision

The Army total, which included 75,562 killed, was an increase of 33,602 since the last casualty announcement on October 5, covering casualties reported through September 21.

The department said part of this increase was due to a revision of its statistical system to provide more up-to-date figures. It added, however, that there remains a time lag of about 15 days between actual casualties and the receipt of individual reports for compilation at the department.

Disorder Ruled In Bordeaux As Nazis Quit

Bordeaux, Oct. 10 (Delayed) (U.P.)—German evacuation of Bordeaux was preceded by a complete breakdown of discipline in which drunken young Nazi recruits roamed the streets insulting officers, looting stores and houses and shooting anyone in sight, it can be revealed now.

The mad 24 hours which started the night of August 27 was climaxed by an incident in which a number of young German soldiers—drunk on looted cognac—began piling haphazardly onto wheelbarrows the ammunition they had been ordered to evacuate.

One shell was dropped and a terrific explosion blew at least 80 Germans to smithereens and wounded many more.

French authorities indicated they had received orders from the Germans to blow up the submarine base as well as the stone bridge linking the city with the Bastide quarter, the railroad ferry and all port installations. But the FFI blew up the blockhouse where the Nazis had placed the central switches which were to explode all facilities simultaneously, thus saving a large part of the city.

By then the German evacuation was in full swing and the Nazis swept through the city, commandeering every type of vehicle they could find, from trucks to bicycles. The looting and pillaging then began.

Nazis soldiers piled on trucks stacked high with baggage, while others rode stolen bicycles or used horse- and mule-drawn farm carts. Some even used horsedrawn buses of ancient vintage as they poured out in headlong flight toward the northeast.

109 D.C. Deaths In '44 Laid to Home Mishaps

Every home is filled with booby traps—such are the sentiments of the Red Cross Accident Prevention Service, which yesterday reported that 4202 persons in the District have been hospitalized from home mishaps since January 1, and that 109 of these have resulted in death.

Typical of accidents are:

The young woman who suffered a dislocated shoulder when she made a convulsive movement upon being awakened suddenly from a sound sleep;

Two others who dislocated their shoulders while dressing.

Three who dislocated their jaws while yawning, and a fourth whose jaw suffered a similar fate while her sister was painting her throat.

Three who received broken bones from falling over pencils, three who stumbled over dogs, three over cats, eight over marbles.

The woman who cut her lip and mouth when she attempted to open a beer bottle with her teeth.

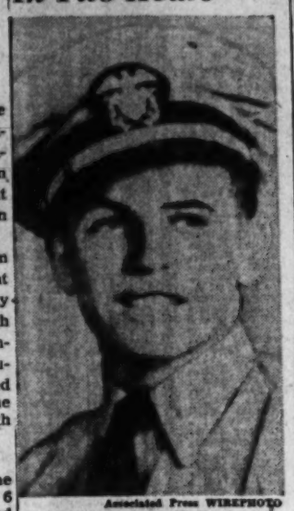

Other booby traps in the home should be filed under the heading of animals—77 people were bitten by dogs, 13 by cats, two by pet monkies and one by a squirrel.

Of the 109 deaths, 78 have been from falls, 13 from burns, 14 from mechanical suffocation and four from gas suffocation.

District Flier Hit Rommel's Headquarters

Marshal Erwin Rommel may have died just a few weeks ago but if Maj. Earl E. Batten of 2803 Rhode Island ave. ne. had only known that he was aiming at on a mission back in February, 1943, the desert fox would have been dead long ago.

BATTEN

Batten who has been back in the States since last November was flight leader on the mission south of Gabes, Tunisia, that day. He had been told to lay bombs on a patch of trees but he had not been informed what was under the trees. Not until Batten and his raiders returned from their mission were they told that their target was Rommel's headquarters. Later prisoners of war and natives reported that when Rommel left Africa shortly afterward he was injured and had to be assisted to a boat. Batten's navigator was Capt. Howard S. Sessler of Arlington, Mass., one of the Tokyo raiders.

The 27-year-old officer who starred in basketball at Tech High School and Maryland University now is at the General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. His wife, Doris, is with him. His mother, Mrs. Frank Clark lives at the Rhode Island ave. address.

Bushfield Sees Dictatorial Peril In Security Plan

Senator Bushfield (R., S. D.) said yesterday he is opposed to giving the United States representative on the proposed world security organization blanket authority to commit the armed forces of this country against an aggressor without congressional approval.

In a statement on the tentative Dumbarton Oaks security plan, Bushfield declared:

"This plan means, according to the best authority now available, . . . that the President proposes to press for a blanket authorization so that once we ar ein, once we have approved this agreement, the functions of Congress are ended and the Presidency becomes a dictatorship. . . ."

"No direct provision is made in this proposal for the appointment of the American member of the security council, but it may be assumed that the President will make this appointment. The appointee, being an appointee, will follow the direction of his presidential creator."

Nightly Police Lineup 'Show' Combines Pathos and Humor

By Jean Reiff

Glaring stage lights. A darkened auditorium. The voice of an unseen police officer hurling questions at blinking prisoners.

A one-act show, with all the humor and pathos of a Broadway production, is put on extemporaneously each night on the brilliantly lighted stage of the line-up room at police headquarters.

To the audience, which remains the same, the show is routine. Some 200-odd detective sergeants and precinct detectives are required four times a week to attend 7 o'clock line-up. Each must make a careful scrutiny of the prisoners paraded before him.

Routine and Novelty

The charges placed against them a routine appearance also, but to the majority it's a new experience. They come from every walk of life. Rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief—many persons arrested by precinct police during the day are paraded on the stage.

The charges place dagainst them vary. Two or three, who were seen acting suspiciously, may be held for investigation. Several have been charged with housebreaking. At least one has slashed a relative or friend with a knife. Two may be there for sex offenses, another for vagrancy, a third because he is a fugitive from justice. An occasional drunk, known to have a long record of arrests, is brought in.

The alibis of the prisoners vary as much as the charges. An illiterate Negro was recently paraded before the officers. He had been arrested on a charge of assaulting an officer.

"Joe," asked the officer in charge, "are you a police fighter?"

"No suh," he answered.

"It says here that when Private James attempted to take you to the precinct in a patrol wagon, you resisted arrest and hit him with your fist."

"Had Nothing to Do With It"

"No suh, I didn't hit him. That is not intentionally."

"What did you do?"

"Well, suh, when I saw that uniform, my arm just naturally came up and struck him. I didn't have nothin' to do with it."

But not all the shows provide humor, and a sordid picture of life presents itself too often. A short, stocky man in his 30's was recently brought to line-up. His aged mother was at Gallinger Hospital, near death from a brutal beating he had given her.

A husband and his wife, whom he forced into prostitution, while he pandered for her, stand sullenly on the stage. To protect him, she will not talk. An old hand at the game, he is too smart to say anything which may be used against him.

Many petty thieves appear nightly. They've been there before and they'll be there again, despite a warning by police "to get out of town."

Light and Shadow

The line-up room is auditorium-size, with a screened elevated platform to the front. Bright lights in the ceiling and floor of this stage glare on the prisoners, preventing them from distinguishing anybody in the darkened room. The prisoners stand before a wall, marked to show their height, and they speak into a microphone.

The officer in charge sits at a desk in the middle of the room, where he reads off the record of the arrest, the record of any past convictions or arrests of each prisoner. The other officers are grouped around him.

The prisoners are brought from the precincts in patrol wagons and are first fingerprinted and photographed and then marched, four at a time, onto the stage. After they are questioned, they are turned over for further questioning to the squad man who handles cases of their kind.

The number of prisoners brought in each night averages about 10. It takes only from 15 to 20 minutes to handle the entire group. The show, fascinating to an outsider, is only part of the day's work to police.

Air Routes Connect Chief Mexican Cities

Ballots in 30 States to Include Amendments, Other Measures

By the Associated Press

Besides helping to elect a President next month, voters in 30 States will mark 126 proposed amendments to State constitutions, referenda and initiated measures. Included are proposed veterans' aids, closed shop bans, poll tax exemptions, $60 old-age pensions, and liquor restrictions.

And in one State—New Jersey—the electorate will accept or reject a whole new constitution, a proposal which has split the State's Democrats and figured importantly in the presidential campaign. Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, State Democratic leader, and his organization, are vigorously opposing the change. Prominent Republicans and the Charles Edison wing of the Democratic Party favor it.

An Associated Press survey yesterday showed three States will vote November 7 on veterans' aid measures. Colorado has a constitutional amendment pending to give fromer servicemen preference in civil service examinations.

Oregon has a proposed constitutional amendment to levy additional property taxes to provide home and farm loans to veterans and a referendum on a property tax for their education.

Alabama and Arkansas voters will pass on proposals to exempt servicemen from poll taxes.

Arizona, Oregon and Washington are putting up to their voters proposals for a 3 to 5 per cent gross income tax to raise money to pay old-age pensions of $60 a month.

Voters in Arkansas and Florida will mark proposed changes in their constitutions to outlaw the closed shop by providing that no person shall be denied employment because of affiliation or nonaffiliation with a union.

Liquor proposals will come up in Nebraska, North Dakota and Oregon. A referendum is on Nebraska's ballot, by petition, to ban the manufacture, sale, transportation, importation, advertising, possesion or use of intoxicating liquors.

North Dakota has an initiated measure to prohibit the sale of liquor in any place where commodities other than tobacco and soft drinks are sold; also a proposed constitutional amendment legalizing municipal-owned and operated liquor stores.

A referendum will be held in Oregon to restrict the sale of wine of more than 14 per cent alcohol by volume to State liquor stores.

Massachusetts will conduct a referendum to permit whist and bridge games for prizes if the total proceeds for admission to the parties are given to charitable, civic, educational, fraternal or religious institutions.

Missouri voters will decide on a constitutional change to authorize a universal legislature of from 50 to 75 members elected for two years at $1200 to $1800 a year salaries plus $6 a day during sessions. (Nebraska is the only State now having a single body legislature.

There will be a referendum in Washington State to permit public utility districts to combine to acquire private power companies; a constitutional change proposal in Oregon to allow counties to adopt the manager form of government, and an initiated act before Arkansas balloters to repeal the State's 1935 horse and dog racing legalization acts.

Anti-Labor Acts Hit

Indianapolis, Oct. 19 (AP).—Woodruff Randolph, president of the International Typographical Union, said today the union had submitted for consideration by the American Federation of Labor a resolution calling on organized labor to recognize as unfair all products from State sthat adopt constitutional amendments which unions may regard as anti-labor.

The resolutino will be presented to the AFL convention in New Orleans in November.

Panagra Files Plea For Extended Service

W. R. Grace & Co., of New York City, has petitioned the Civil Aeronautics Board to find that a through New York-West Coast of South America air service by Pan American-Grace Airways (Panagra) is required in the public interest.

Such service would permit far faster travel from New York to the West Coast of South America by a single through-carrier instead of by three connecting carriers as at present.

The Grace petition charges that Pan American Airways is using its ownership of 50 per cent of the stock of Panagra to prevent Panagra from making application for a similar through service on the West Coast. W. R. Grace & Co. owns the other 50 per cent of Panagra which now operates from the Panama Canal down the West Coast of South America and over the Andes to Buenos Aires.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP).—A Government order reducing the reporting limit on open positions in December rye knocked the edge off the bearish trade in that cereal today and prices broke sharply only to recover most of the losses near the close. Other markets also were on the down trend, but wheat rallied to finish with fractional gains.

The rye order, posted before the opening, is effective tomorrow and concerns only the December contract. Issued by the Commodity Exchange Branch of the War Food Administration, it specified that all open positions in December rye in excess of 25,000 bushels must be reported. The previous limit was 200,000 bushels.

At the close wheat was ⅛ lower to ¼ higher than yesterday's finish, December 1.65, Corn was ¾ to ⅞ lower, December 1.13¼. Oats were off ⅛ to ⅜, December 64⅞. Rye was unchanged to ½ lower, December 1.11¾@1.11⅞. Barley was off ⅜ to 1¼, December 1.05.

Specialties, Rails Climb In Mixed List

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Selective strength for rails and specialties persisted in today's stock market, although bidding steam evaporated from many leaders.

Dividends and individual situations, plus good war news and further political optimism, served to inspire some demand, but assorted customers inclined to hold aloof to see whether the averages could break through the seven-year peaks established last July. There were fears that these levels might bring out liquidation. The realization idle investment funds remained in waiting, however, served as a prop for sentiment.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was unchanged, at 55.7

At highs for the year or longer were Lerner Stores, reflecting a proposal for a three for one splitup of the common; North American Aviation, following a dividend boost from $1 to $1.25, and Douglas Aircraft, resonding to big earnings and waning of short war talk.

Heavy debt reductions and brightening of cash positions for most roads spurred carrier securities.

Ahead were Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Texas Pacific Land Trust, Hercules Motors, American Can and Philip Morris. On the offside were United States Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Graham-Paige, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester, American Telephone, Westinghouse and Johns-Manvillle.

Scattered railway bonds advanced. At Chicago, wheat was down one eighth to up one quarter of a cent a bushel. Cotton was 5 to 15 cents a bale lower.

Retail Spending To Reach Record Of 67 Billion

By the Associated Press

Americans are spending 67 billion dollars in retail stores this year, an average of $510 for every man, woman and child, the Commerce Department estimated yesterday.

Though shoppers never spent this much before, the actual quantity of goods purchased probably reached its peak in 1941.

Louis J. Paradiso, chief of the business statistics unit, Bureau of Foreign and omestic Commerce, making the estimate in the October issue of the department's Survey of Current Business, said retail spending was $320 in 1939 and $430 in 1941.

He figured rising prices accounted for about 70 per cent of the increase in dollar sales from 1939 to 1944.

If durable goods were not scarce in some lines, Paradiso estimated shoppers would spend 87 billion dollars this year instead of 7 billion.

He picked 1944 as the probable pear year for retail6 dollar volume, saying production cutbacks after the defeat of Germany "will curtail consumer incomes."

Utility Offering Slated Today

Philadelphia, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Securities and Exchange Commission approved today the Philadelphia Electric Co.'s acceptance of a bid by the Mellon Securities Corp., Pittsburgh, and the first Boston corporation, New York, to underwrite 130 million dollars principal amount of 2¾ per cent first and refunding mortgage bonds, due 1679 and 1974.

The underwriting syndicate is paying 99.44888 per cent for the 65 million dollars of bonds maturing 1967 and reselling them for 100½ per cent. The remaining bonds, due 1974, are being bought for 98.94888 and resold at 100 per cent.

The offering is to be made tomorrow.

Stockholders Approve Textile Firms' Merger

Sanford, Me., Oct. 19 (AP).—Majorities of stockholders of the Goodall Worsted Co. and the Sanford Mills otday approved a merger of the two concerns into a $23,842,000 corporation to be known as Goodall-Sanford, Inc.

'Fraser Plan' On Manpower Outlined Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

The 'Fraser plan' to utilize manpower resources was described last night at a dinner meeting of the Washington chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management, in Barker Hall of the YWCA.

The plan, now operating in the western area of the Bell Telephone Co. of Canada, was developed by Clarence Fraser, Bell placement supervisor, who was invited here to outline the methods which have attracted international attention.

From its four years of experience with the program, Mr. Fraser said, the Bell company found it possible to set up planned work-career routes, interdepartmental transfer procedures for developing management men, and training programs both on and off the job.

Individual Reviews

The plan, said Mr. Fraser, embraces an annual review by his immediate supervisors of each employe in terms of his health, performance, relationships to others, and aptitudes. A personnel review group goes over each report and after group discussion determines both a "long range objective" and a "short range plan of treatment," including plans for training, transfer, upgrading, or other disposition. All recommendations are the result of group discussions, based on first-hand evidence of employe performance.

(There are many details to the 'Fraser Plan' but space does not permit more description. Pamphlets detailing the methods have been printed by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and are available.)

"Man-by-man inventory of our manpower resources," Mr. Fraser stated, "gave us some startling results. For years we had been using a control scheme for manpower in quantitative terms. This qualitative picture added depth and penetration. We discovered, for example, that only 10 per cent of our men recommended for higher rank were adequately developed for immediate promotion, and that about 40 per cent would not be ready for three years."

Used by Other Firms

C. W. Foster, supervisor of personnel and public relations of the Dominion Stores, Ltd., described the success of his organization in applying the plan throughout the firm's chain of stores in four provinces, and told how other Dominion concerns had adopted the plan.

Participating in a panel discussion following the principal addresses, were W. Frank Sutherland, personnel director, Toronto Hydro-Electric system, Toronto, and George Jackson, chief of the organization branch of the Civil Service Commission of Canada. Chairman of the panel was Milton Rygh, chief of the supervisory improvement program of the United States Civil Service Commission, and presiding officer was Fred G. Macarow, assistant general manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

The dinner-meeting was the first event of the Washington chapter's fall program, and attracted a capacity attendance from Government and business executives of this area.

Late Earnings Statements

Industrial Rayon Corp. reports for nine months to September 30, net profit of $1,397,684, equal, after dividends on preferred stock issue this year, to $1.63 a share on the common stock. This compared with $1,196,451, or $1.58 a share or the capital stock outstanding in the like period in 1943.

Van Raalte Co., Inc., reports for nine months to September 30, net profit of $523,051, equal to $3.54 a share, against $564,818, or $3.81 a share, in the 1943 months.

Motor Products Corp. reports for the September quarter net profit of $193,337, after postwar reserves of $35,000, equal to 50 cents a share, compared with $255,461, after a reserve of $90,000, equal to 65 cents a share, in the third quarter of 1943.

Sun Oil Completes $7,000,000 Plant

Philadelphia, Oct. 19 (AP).—Completion and operation of a new seven-million-dollar lubricating oil plant at Sun Oil Co.'s Marcus Hook, Pa., refinery, was announced today by J. Howard Pew, president of Sun Oil.

The plant, one of the largest solvent refining composite units in the world, marks the next-to-last link in the company's conversion to maximum war production, Pew said. The final link, a thermofor catalytic cracking unit for the production of additional aviation gasoline base stock, is in the final stages of completion, he added.

POSTWAR OPENING NEW YORK CITY

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

FANCY EATS FOR VETERANS. Olmsted's, with fine thoughtfulness, is giving dinner parties for veterans from overseas on Mondays and Tuesdays. Half a dozen boys from Walter Reed Hospital are entertained on Mondays and a similar group from the Naval Hospital on Tuesdays. Army and Navy food is good—but a luxury dinner in an elegant restaurant is a wonderful treat for lads who've lived on K-rations.

Mario Hurtado and his rumba band (one of the best!) will return to Treasure Island next Tuesday after a couple months' absence. They'll alternate dance groups with Carr Van Sickler's orchestra.

TONIGHT'S PUZZLE is whether to take in the gilded "Champagne and Orchids Party" in the Mayflower Lounge or to attend the opening of Cross and Dunn at the Del Rio. Best way to make a choice is probably to flip a coin.

RINGING MUSICAL CHANGES. Johnny Graham, now at Merry-Land, and guitarist "Chick" Webb have formed their own unit, christened it "The Guardsmen" and will open at the Restaurant "400" on Monday. They'll play straight through from 6 p. m. to 1 a. m. Leader Frank Oxley of Merry-Land is adding Pianist Sid Willoughby and guitarist Paul Adams to his crew beginning Monday.

Adrian Rollini may be at El Patio for a few weeks in December—if New York's Copocabana consents to loan him to Washington. Little Jack Little has set his heart on a Christmas vacation and Adrian is the only one to fill the L.J.L. spot.

FEMME ANGLES. Lyda Allen at the Casino Royal has a red formal with long tight sleeves—but six inches of bare midriff showing. . . . Adeline Neice of Kavakos Grill wears platform shoes a la Carmen Miranda with four-inch soles . . . Gaylu Ingram, singing at the Old New Orleans, has a brother in the gunnery school near Las Vegas, Nev. But she says that he says he doesn't care for the unfettered diversions of Las Vegas . . . Oldtimers say that Sharron Terry, new nightingale at Crossroads, looks like Peggy Joyce in her hey-hey-day . . . Dena Larena, sultry blond soprano of the Balalaika, wears a necklace, earrings and bracelet of huge brilliants set in black enamel. . . . Lotus' eight Lotusettes have currently gone Russian in gayly beflowered costumes, are doing a gazotsky or something . . . Maxine Barrett of the Cafe Parisienne has the reddest hair and the most voluminously skirted dancing frock in this territory . . . Eddie Jane Poindexter of the Madrillon is always nervously a-flutter on Saturday nights, the only ones when her heart-throb can get to town.

Next week will start in "high." Art Hinett of NBC and the spinning platters will bring his trio to the Neptune Room on Monday. Art leads from the organ, blends his harmonies with a guitar and bass.

A DANCING LANDSLIDE is created every night in the Lounge Riviera when Pete Macias' band strikes up. Looking around the other night we saw exactly six sitters, everyone else jammed on the dance floor. The answer, naturally, lies in the silky but exciting rhythm of Macias and his assistant perfectionists, Eddie Whitesell, Beach Johnson, Tommy Nouregas and "Candy" Willis. They're superslickers.

HAPPY WEEKEND PROSPECTS. La Conga, on the Baltimore blvd., lures with a Pan-American show, D'Acquilo's rumba band, Donnelly James' Broadway rhythm. You can go there on the bus if your gas is running low . . . The Fat Boy on New York ave. extended offers "chicken in the rough," dance music in the groove by King Carter . . . Saturday night dancing at River Bend is a preferred item . . . If you prefer to stay in town you'll find the Hi Hat and Windsor Room jampacked with gay folks, the Anchor Room a pleasant retreat for sipping and chatting . . . The China Clipper has a bright show, Joe Ford's good dance music and absolutely wonderful Chinese food, all for a reasonable price . . . Don't overlook dinner or luncheon at the Chicken Hut, new and completely handsome downtown spot . . . Mayfair with Al Yurdin's dextrously tossed melodies, is a "must" for anyone roaming F st. Ask him to play "Malaguena" for you.

Congressional Action Sought On State Taxes

A recommendation that the Supreme Court "jolt" Congress into doing something about asserted income tax inequalities between States which hae community property laws and those which do not, was made to the high tribunal today by a Tulsa, Okla., attorney.

The "jolt," said attorney Villard Martin, might be provided by the tribunal upholding a lower court decision that under Oklahoma's community property law a man and his wife in computing their Federal income taxes may divide equally their total income.

Such a Supheme Court finding was opposed by Samuel O. Clark, jr., United States assistant attorney general, who argued that the 50-50 division would result in the Federal Government losing huge sums in surtaxes on individual incomes.

Eight Have Such Laws

Eigst States have community property laws under which husband and wife are held to be equal owners of property they acquire. Oklahoma and Oregon have similar laws, but these two States require husband wife to elect formally to place themselves under the statutes if they wish their property to be on a 50-50 bassi.

Clark told the court that the Oklahoma law was a "tax windfall" to married couples; said the Oklahoma system was put into effect to reduce Federal taxes on individuals and complained it was discriminatory against taxpayers of other States.

Martin said that before passage of the Oklahoma law, thousands of Oklahoma businessmen, including many oil men, found they could carr yon their business as well from nearby community property States, particularly Texas, and by residing in those States they had the advantage of lower Federal income taxes.

"The Oklahoma Legislature" he said, enacted this low in self defense against community property states. . . . The solution to this whole problem of unequal taxation lies in sustaining the Oklahoma law. Then Congress either will be forced to act to correct these inequalities, or all States will become community property States and Congress can raise surtaxes on separate returns."

"You think," interjected Chief Justice Stone, "that this court ought to nudge Congress?"

"Yes, Martin answered emphatically. "I think you should jolt Congress into doing something. There's where the power lies. If Congress does not act, the inequality of the income tax laws will be accentuated. And if the Oklahoma law is knocked out by this court, the eight 'traditional' community property States will have the tax advantage."

Alex. Cameron Funeral Today

Richmond, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. Friday for Alexander Cameron, jr., 74, active for many years in the tobacco business here, who died yesterday at a Richmond hospital.

A member of a prominent Richmond and Orange County family, Cameron was the son of Col. Alexander Cameron, a veteran of the Confederate army, and Mrs. Mary Maxall Cameron, and began his business career with his father's tobacco firm, Cameron & Cameron, tobacco manufacturers.

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 19 (AP).—A complaint that the town ordinance prohibiting children from skating on sidewalks was not being enforced brought prompt action by Salisbury's council.

First Lady Says Women May 'Swing Election'

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 19 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today she hasn't been "traveling very much lately" and therefore doesn't know how the women'se vote in the November 7 election "is shaping up."

The President's wife made the comment during a press conference at which she said it was possible that the women's vote might "swing the election."

She also asserted that a great many women in the United States do not have "as real a conception of the war as those women have in countries where fighting is going on."

Commenting on a skit presented last week by the Twentieth Century Club, Buffalo women's social organization, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"I am used to seeing myself caricatured in all sorts of things over a long period of time. I couldn't possibly let them bother me. The Natinol aPress Club is always doing that sort of thing. Of course, a great deal depends on the spirit in which it is done, whether it's in fun or done in a malicious way."

Mrs. Edward Sharpe, president of the club, has said the skit was a "very pleasant and not unfriendly satire" but Mrs. Norman E. Mack resigned from the club in protest against it.

Hearn Street, Austin, Looks to V-Day

Austin, Tex. (U.P.).—For its length and number of homes, Hearn street should qualify for its contribution to the war.

There are 19 stars in the windows of the 12 homes on the three-block long lane. From these homes 15 sons and four sons-in-law have gone into the armed forces.

Nine of them are overseos, one being a German prisoner of war. Another acquired a strong liking for England—he married an English girl. The others are training in the United States.

Folks here call Hearn street "Austin's honor street for servicemen," and there'll likely be a big celebration when they return.

Name to Help

Fort Devens, Mass. (U.P.).—General Montgomery takes his regular turn at KP in the Army Service Forces training center here. But this is Pvt. General Montgomery of Company L, 2d regiment, and KP is just as common with him as with any other GI Joe.

Nation Split Again On Proper Date For Thanksgiving

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Nation is split again on when to celebrate Thanksgiving Day.

Five States—Florida, Idaho, Nebraska, Texas and Virginia, plan to observe November 30 through local choice.

Forty-one States and the District have fixed November 23 for the holiday, following Federal statute.

In two States, Arkansas and Georgia, there is a chance that both dates wil be recognized.

CAN CHINA STAY IN THE WAR?

Victory is everywhere—but in China.

Mark Gayn shows how "Crisis in China" is crisis, too, for our men in the Pacific. He pulls no punches, reports the facts as he sees them in Collier's out today. China has been at war for seven years with Japan. She is groggy now and must have aid in her fight against inflation, starvation, disease and tragic internal political dissension. She must have more help from her Allies—or the duration of the war will be lengthened far beyond present estimates

Another article in the same issue casts a ray of hope on the whole Pacific situation. Robert Bellaire, in "Japan's Neck Is Out!" pictures the capture of Saipan and Guam as putting the Empire's neck squarely on the chopping block. He discusses the different ways in which Japan may be decapitated on the basis of his experience as a correspondent in the Southwest Pacific.

From the other side of a world at war, Martha Gellhorn cables "Cracking the Gothic Line." Here is lean, biting and graphic prose on the recent Italian front defeat of Kesselring by superior allied strategy.

This week's Collier's puts the finger on sore spots where something should be done—and quickly—to help win the war—and the peace. Collier's shows the dark as well as the bright side. ★ Read about the problems facing our own West Coast aircraft industry in "Trouble in the Sky" by Jim Marshall. But the "think pieces" are salted with the finest in comics and five swiftly paced short stories—including "1-2-3!" the romance of a paratroop topkick with a beautiful girl taxi-driver and "Will's Girl" by Brendan Gill, full of mellow pathos. ★ And it isn't too late to start reading the thrilling new mystery serial, "Perilous Holiday," by Robert Carson—second installment in this issue.

Legend Bearer Takes Laurel's Staab Purse

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

There's fresh word of Curly Ogden, and he's in a bigger league now . . . in there pitching with the United States Forces in France as boss of what the War Department calls one of the "hottest" jobs of the Army Engineeers.

POVICH

Ogden's regiment moved in after the Germans, pushed out of a French city on the Paris rail line, demolished a 104-high bridge. With the fighting still in progress beyond a ridge, Lieutenant Ogden's men used explosives the Nazis left behind and cleared the high mound of rubble at the base of the bridge. Within earshot of the battle ahead, they raised a new structure.

That he'd ever be occupied in any such job must have been a pretty remote idea for Curly Ogden 20 years ago when he was a pitching hero for the Nats in peacetime Washington. The city was in the grip of baseball hysteria in October, 1924. Bucky Harris' Nats had won the first pennant in Washington history. They were playing the Giants in the World Series, and Ogden was to figure in the strangest pitching sequence in World Series annals.

Naturally enough Curly Ogden landed with the Engineers after Pearl Harbor. He had come out of Swarthmore College in the early twenties with an engineering degree, a great pitching arm and a bundle of offers from big league scouts. Connie Mack signed him. He clicked as a big leaguer right away.

Then something happened to Ogden's arm. It went bad, and the Athletics put him on the waier list. The Nats, battling the Yankees for the pennant through August and September, signed him at the $7500 waiver price. For the Nats and Ogden, it was a lucky stroke. Without him, they could not have won the pennant.

With the Nats Ogden underwent a magical transformation. He ripped off nine victories in a row in those final weeks of the season when the Nats finally beat out the Yankees by a game and a half margin. The tall, black-haired right-hander, certainly the handsomest pitcher Washington ever owned, held together Bucky Harris' tired staff topped by Walter Johnson, George Mogridge and Tom Zachary.

"He amazed me every time he won a ball game," Bucky Harris recalls. "Ogden and I and Muddy Ruel were roommates that season, and only Ruel and I could appreciate what Ogden went through to win those games for us. His arm always was sore, despite those nine games in a row he won, but the fans never knew it."

"He never lasted more than one year, you know," said Harris. "He must have pitched hsi heart out for us in those final weeks. I know he pitched his arm out. Every night after a ball game, Curly would be walking the floor, holding his arm in pain through the small hours. It always hurt him, but he wouldn't miss his regular turn."

Despite Ogden's string of victories, he didn't figure in Harris' World Series plans against McGraw's Giants. "I knew his arm still hurt him, and anyway I had to string along with such as Johnson and Mogridge and Zachary as my starting pitchers," relates Harris. "Curly got into the World Series only because of a hunch I had."

That hunch by Harris made World Series history, you remember. The series was down to the seventh and deciding game when the Nats' boy manager pulled the most audacious maneuver of the series. "I talked to Ogden the night before the game and told him I wanted him to start the game, pitch to one batter, and get out of there, and he agreed."

It was an attempt by Harris to outwit McGraw, and it succeeded. The man in the Giants' batting order of whom Harris was chiefly afraid was Bill Terry, left-handed slugger. "I figured if McGraw saw me start a right-hander he'd have Terry in there, then I'd pull Ogden and put in the left-handed Mogridge. At least Terry wouldn't be hitting against a right-hander, and maybe McGraw would pull him out against Mogridge."

Even Clark Griffith didn't know of Harris' plan until Ogden went to the mound the next day. The one man Ogden was supposed to face was Freddy Lindstrom. He struck Lindstrom out on three pitches. Then the crowd in amazement, saw Ogden roll up his glove, stuff it in his hip pocket and start off the mound, apparently through for the day.

"I weakened a bit when I saw Ogden fan Lindstrom, and decided to let him stay in," said Harris. "But then he walked Frisch, and I went through with my original plan. Mogridge went in, McGraw pulled Terry out, and replaced him with George Kelley. It worked out nicely for us. Walter Johnson struck Kelley out twice with men on third and one out in the late innings, and we wound up winning the ball game in the twelfth."

Hagberg Happy Over Navy's Underdog Role With Ga. Tech

Annapolis, Oct. 19 (AP).—"Georgia Tech in every rating system in the country is 'way above us. Certainly on performance so far, Navy deserves to be the underdog, and that's the way we'll enter Saturday's game in Atlanta."

On which pessimistic note, Head Navy Football Coach Comdr. Oscar E. Hagberg prepared today to pack up 42 members of his squad for tomorrow's journey to Georgia.

Navy's starting backfield probably will be Ralph Ellsworth, Dave Barksdale, Clyde Scott and Bob Jenkins or Hal Hamberg. The line will be virtually unchanged from that of last week, except that it's a tossup between Jack Hansen and Ben Martin for the right end position, Hagberg disclosed.

The Midshipmen will enter their first game out of home territory with a record of one loss and two wins, having lost theopener to North Carolina Preflight 21 to 14 at Annapolis, triumphed over Penn State 55 to 14 here, and eked out a 7 to 0 win over Duke Univeristy in Baltimore last Saturday.

Georgia Tech boasts three straight wins over Clemson, North Carolina and Auburn.

Five Games Set In County Loop

With one-third of the season already past, the Prince Georges County Boys Football League has arranged the following contests for the fourth week of a nine-week schedule:

Hyattsville Police Boys Club vs. Berwyn Police Boys Club at the University of Maryland; the National Training School vs. Hornet AC at National Training School; George News Shop vs. Greenbelt at Rosedale Playground; Maryland Park Police Boys Club vs. Georgetown Trojans at Maryland Park High School; and Laurel Police Boys Club vs. Mount Rainier Boys Club at Mount Rainier High School.

Last Sunday's games resulted in the following scores: Maryland Park, 6, Hyattsville, 0; National Training School, 6, Georges News Shop, 6; Berwyn, 12, Laurel, 12; Greenbelt 13, Mount Rainier, 0; and Georgetown Trojans 19, Hornet AC 0.

The Berwyn team has become a Police Boys Club unit, the ninth of the parent organization, which is sponsoring the county league. Age limit of the new league is 19 years, weight limit, a team average of 150 pounds. All games are played on Sundays, at 2 p. m., unless specially announced otherwise. Admissions are free.

Mrs. Oscar Fraley, Writer's Wife, Dies In Auto Accident

Woodbury, N. J., Oct. 19 (U.P.).—Mrs. Mary Eastlack Fraley, 28, Woodbury, wife of United Press Sports Writer Oscar Fraley, was killed instantly today in an automobile accident that also cost the life of Mrs. Naomi Colna, 28, Woodbury.

Mrs. Colna, one of six persons injured when the automobiles of Mrs. Dorothy Bonner, Woodbury, and Lieut. John Hurley, Woodbury, were forced from the highway by a third car, died in Cooper Hospital, Camden, several hours after the accident.

Police said the Bonner car, occupied by four women, leaped a curb and crashed into a cafe, and then caught fire. Hurley, an Army Air Force pilot home on leave from the European front, and a Marine occupying his car were injured when their automobile mounted the curb and then turned over.

Charlotte Hall, St. Alban's Clash

The Charlotte Hall Military Academy's gridders will battle a strong St. Alban's eleven at Charlotte Hall tomorrow to feature activities in the Cadets' annual Homecoming Day. The Cadets, fresh from a 12 to 6 victory over a favored Fairfax High are eager to follow up with another victory.

The Saints who were defeated last week when Devitt Prep rallied in the final period, are at full strength and will be primed for revenge.

Former Cyclone Killed

Md. Gridders Clash With State Tonight

By Dick Wyatt
Post Staff Writer

Tonight's football game between Michigan State and the University of Maryland, starting at 8:15 p. m. under the lights of Byrd Stadium, will introduce the Alphabet Complex Offense.

State will use its 3-B scoring punch and the Z-formation, and Maryland will counter with its L-T.

Coach Charlie Bachman insists Michigan State is using a simplified ocensive system. There's no fancy shift or introcate ball-handling, but the Bachman 3-Bs provide plenty of punch.

3-Bs Are Potent

Breslin, State's triple-threat, has lugged the ball in 51 of State's 137 rushing plays for a 3.2-yard average, and has scored three touchdowns for the undefeated Spartans. He has tossed 11 of State's 34 forward passes, four of which were completed for a total of 216 yards. Bruegger has carried the ball 139 yards in 16 trials for an 8.7 average. He also scored three touchdowns, and has completed 6 of 14 pass attempts for 263 yards.

Brogger doesn't appear in the scoring column, but he is one of the better pass receivers among the Spartans and is a hard man to stop once he touches that ball.

Love, Troll Pace Terps

Maryland's L-T is Jack Love and Bob Troll, former Central star. Both are excellent passers and kickers and can carry the mail. Love and Troll, against West Virginia last Saturday night, went through the line in every possible way. Maryland's offense is built around their speed and power.

With Frank Doory, Norma Gaetz and Joe McCarthy as targets, Love and Troll's passing tonight is expected to keep the powerful Spartans from Michigan State plenty busy, as well as worried.

Coach Doc Spears has worked his charges at a rapid pace this week in an effort to field a strong line and last night announced the following frontier: Frank Doory and Joe McCarthy at ends; Wilbur Rock, former Central star, and John Simmons, at tackles; Capt. Les Daly and Si Continetti at guards and Charles Campbell at center. The Terp line will average 184 pounds against State's 188 but the Marylanders' speed is expected to account for the difference.

The Terp backfield will consist of Sal Fastuca at quarter, Jack Love at Sam Behr at the halves, and Bob Troll at full. The State back will outweight Maryland's 177 pounds to 172 but, here again Terp speed is expected to even matters.

Grondzik	L.E.	Doory
Dondrine	L.T.	Rock

13 Basketball Twin Bills Set AtPhiladelphia

Philadelphia, Oct. 19 (AP).—A schedule of 13 basket ball doubleheaders at Convention Hall, with such teams as Utah and Army, standouts last year, furnishing the opposition for Philadelphia college teams, was announced today.

Utah, winner of the National Collegiate AA tournament, meets St. Joseph's, defending city champion, in the first bill of the season, December 9, with Holy Cross vs. Temple as the other attraction.

Army, undefeated last year, meets the University of Pennsylvania on February 17, when the second game will bring together New York University and Temple.

A newcomer to the schedule is the University of Puerto Rico, which plays St. Joseph's the night of January 1. The second attraction will pit Temple against Wyoming, 1943 NCAA champion.

The Schedule:

December 9, St. Joseph's vs. Utah, Temple vs. Holy Cross; 16, Temple vs. Oklahoma A. & M., Penn vs. Dartmouth; 27, Temple vs. Tennessee, St. Joseph's vs. Western Kentucky; 30, Penn vs. Muhlenberg, Temple vs. Kentucky.

January 1, Temple vs. Wyoming, St. Joseph's vs. Puerto Rico; 6, Penn vs. Cornell, Temple vs. Syracuse; 13, Penn vs. St. Joseph's, Temple vs. St. John's; 20, St. Joseph's vs. Rhode Island State, Penn vs. Columbia.

February 3, St. Joseph's vs. St. John's, Temple vs. West Virginia; 10, Temple vs. Duke, Penn vs. Princeton; 17, Penn vs. Army, Temple vs. New York University; 24, Temple vs. Penn State, St. Joseph's vs. City College of New York.

March 3, Temple vs. St. Joseph's, LaSalle vs. Oklahoma.

Massanuttten, Augusta to Clash

Woodstock, Va., Oct. 19.—Massanutten Military Academy's football squad will begin a long home stand Saturday when it meets the powerful Augusta Academy on Siebert Field. Following this game, Massanutten will meet Devill Prep, of Washington and West Nottingham Academy on successive Saturdays.

The Massanutten-Augusta contest is an annual rivalry, and Saturdays contest will draw even more interest as both squads are undefeated this season.

Leading the home team attack will be Jim DiDimenico, who has scored 18 points in the first two games. Augusta will probably build its attack around speedster Al Debello.

Maryland Triple-Threater

Murray Still Rates Cavaliers Fastest in Eight Years

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 19.—Virginia's head football coach, Frank Murray, sees no reason to revise his opinion, publicly expressed at the start of the season, that this year's team would be the fastest since he started tutoring the Cavaliers eight years ago.

After four games during which the Virginians have netted gains of more than 1100 yards from scrimmage Coach Murray is positive that this is his fastest team. He might even go further and say it is the best Virginia team in eight years If, If, If—progress, including those in engineering, physics, chemistry and

day's 13-13 tie with North Carolina Navy Pre-Flight.

If No. two injuries, which began to slow down the squad even before the season started, do not cost the services of any key ditto and ditto and ditto.

If No. 3 forces of wind and weather do not again gang up on the Cavaliers as they did in Norfolk to bring the only loss this season to a North Carolina State tea... that made no first downs and gained only 10 yards from scrimmage while the Cavaliers were netting 12 first downs and gaining more than 200 yards.

Have No Bill Deudleys

In saying that this may be his best team at Virginia in eight seasons Coach Murray is quick to point out that the squad roster includes no such outstanding player as Bill Dudley, captain and all American in 1941.

But Murray has lots of praise, individually and collectively, for members of the squad which has just broken up for a short vacation, but which will get together again next Wednesday to start training for the game with V. M. I. in Lynchburg on October 28.

The Cavalier coach thinks that Hank Walker, now playing end, is the most versatile gridiron performer he had had since he came to Virginia. He has been lavish in his praise of the linemen, and he likes the way most of the backs have been performing both on offense and defense.

In their four games the Valaliers have netted 54 first downs while holding their four opponents to a scant 14 first downs. In every game Virginia gained more first downs than the rival eleven, even against N. C. Preflight, and one rival, N. C. State, was not permitted to make the required distance at all.

1107 Yards in Scrimmage

Virginia has not only rolled up a total of 1107 yards from scrimmage, but has not failed to gain at lease 200 yards in any game. The four rivals have been held to a net yaardage total of 273, less than one-fourth made by the Cavaliers during the first half of the season.

Virginia's rivals show a passing superiority over the Cavaliers, but this is all to the credit of one player, Otto Graham, brilliant former All-American of Northwestern who threw 25 passes for N. C. Pre-Flight and saw 13 of the mcompleted for gains totaling 110 yards. The Cloudbusters netted only 85 yards rushing.

Virginia's passers, Lucien Burnett and Dick Michels, had advantage over the rival backs in other games. The Cavaliers have thrown 30 passes, had 15 completed for 166 yards. Except for N. C. Pre-Flight the other three teams threw 23 passes, but couldn complete only five for a scant 19 yeards.

Cavalier punters, Burnett, Michels and Charlie Ellis, outbooted their rivals with a 39 yard average on 28 Virginia kicks to a 33.2 average for 43 rival boots. The opposition averages is considerably pulled up by the punting of the Cloudbusters' Graham and Stan Koslowski.

South Carolina Bows Before Clemson, 20-13

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 19 (AP).—An underdog Clemson eleven upset the University of South Carolina Gamecocks in their forty-second State Fair game in a steady rain today, 20 to 13, for the South Carolina championship. A crowd of 18,000 sa wthe game.

The Tigers scored on a 64-yard first period drive and were never headed in the Southern Conference contest. They protected their lead with 65 and 40 yard scoring thrusts in the third and fourth periods as the Gamecocks forced over second and fourth period touchdowns.

The teams entered the second half with Clemson ahead, 7 to 6. The Tigers protected that narrow edge by driving 65 yards from the kick-off straight over the goal.

The Tigers punched again in the final stanza after recovering a fumble on the Carolina 40-yard line to take a 20-to-6 lead.

Right after that the Gamecocks took the kickoff on their 4 and drove 96 yards for their second touchdown, but the time expired before they could get the ball again for another try.

The Tigers outgained the Gamecocks, 302 to 126, on the ground. South Carolina completed three of 1 3passes for a gain of 23 yards, but the Tigers were content to stick to running for gains, failing to complete either of their two aerials. The Clemson offense registered 11 first downs to 9 for the Birds.

Cheatham, Durdan Join Commodores

Bainbridge, Md., Oct. 19 (AP).—Hilliard Cheatham, 200-pound first string quarterback, and Don Durdan, Oregon State's Rose Bowl star, reported for football practice at the Bainbridge Naval Training Center today for the first time this week.

Both were nursing injuries and took part only in light conditioning drills in preparation for the Camp Peary game at Williamsburg Sunday. The rest of the team had an intensive workout.

Still missing from practice was Jackie Field, the Texas University climax runner who has been one of the Commodores' most consistent ground grainers this year. He, too, is nursing an injury.

Massanutten, Staunton Jr. Varsities Tie, 0-0

C. V. Whitney Entry Pays $5 Mutuel

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 19.—Col. C. V. Whitney's Legend Bearer, a 4-year-old daughter of The Porter and Motto, won her third race during this meeting today when she got up in the final jumps to take the Staab Purse featuring the Thursday program. With JJockey Nick James riding a well-timed race, Legend Bearer defeated W. L. Brann's Challedonna by a half length with George Perry's Smiling Lass a neck back in the field of five going a mile and one-eighth.

One of the two out-of-the-money horses was Glen Riddle Farms' One Two Three and her appearance in fourth position caused much disappointment to favorite players in a crowd of 10,000. More than $45,000 was sunk on One Two Three on the win end.

Legend Bearer paid $5 as a live second choice and was clocked in 1:54 3-5 for the route over a track that was as fast as it has been at th ismeeting.

One-Two Three Tires

One Two Three, supposed to have the most speed of the party, failed to get to the front. Smiling Lass, the longest shot in the field set the pace with One Two Three closest in the early stages. These two headed the parade into the stretch where One Two Three tired. Challedonna shot up on the inside and Legend Bearer came with a rush on the outside. The Whitneyite won going away.

John A. Manfuso's Art Brown was a surprise winner of the fourth race, the mutuel department hanging out a $147.80 mutuel on the son of Aneroid. Apprentice R. Meade riding his second winner of the day, brought the 3-year-old colt along with a bold rush against the inside rail to defeat A. J. Fralinger's Plane Shadow by a neck. O. D. Bennett's Doctor Jeep was third. Col. C. V. Whitney's Peace Dust, the heavily played favorite, was in trouble and finished fifth in the limit field of 12 going six furlongs. The winner was clocked in 115-3/5.

Foul Marks Seventh Race

A disqualification marked the seventh race. M. B. Goff's Director was the winner by a length with Col. C. V. Whitney's Cave Man second and J. G. Peiper, jr., Linza third. Jockey Nick James, who rode Cave Man, the favorite, claimed Director lunged into his mount, forcing the choice against Linza in the early part of the stretch run. Cave Man was moved into the winning [illegible] Director was put in third position. Cave Man paid $4.80 to win and was clocked in 1:48 3-5.

Between races—Art (WOL) Brown saw Art (horse) Brown do his stuff here today . . . I understand he split a $2 win ticket on his namesake. . . . Twilight Tear will start in the $15,000 Maryland Handicap on Saturday. . . . Big Push and Westminster are two possible opponents. . . . The Christiana Stable evidently wants no part of Twilight Tear and shipped Megogo to New York for the Gallant Fox Handicap. . . . By the way, Trainer Ben Jones said this morning that Twilight Tear would run in the Pimlico Special regardless of the opposition and asked, "What's become of that horse named By Jiminy?" . . . Yancey Christmas is down on his luck. . . . The clock at his barn stopped and Yancey arrived at the secretary's office too late to enter Challamore in the 10,000 Burch Memorial which was won by Adroit, a horse that Challamore had whipped here. . . . Willie Jones has entered Rouge Dragon, the famous jumper in two races here and has scratched on both occasions. . . . There's no rule against that but the stewards would like to have one. . . . It is said Jones had no intention of runnning his horse in either race.

Md. Cagers Book 11 Games; Open Drills Monday

Dates of 11 games of a tentative 14-game schedule for the University of Maryland basketball team were announced yesterday by Coach Burton Shipley.

Games already scheduled for a squad that will be made up almost wholly of untried talent included:

January 6, Duke at Durham; 11, Navy at Annapolis; 13, V. M. I.; 19, Delaware; 27, Hampden-Sydney.

February 3, Virginia at Charlottesville; 5, V. M. I. at Lexington; 10, Virginia; 16, Marshall College; 17, Richmond U.; 28, Army at West Point.

Tentative games are pending with North Carolina State and West Virginia and Shipley said he hoped to arrange one contest at home prior to the holidays, the Associated Press reported.

Shipley will have only Jack Flynn of last year's team, although there may be a number of former school stars on the grid squad available after the close of the season November 30. The coach plans to open practice with the nongridders next Monday.

Middie Battler

Richmond, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—Henry D. Whittle, jr., 20, who played freshman football and wrestled in the heavyweight class at Virginia Military Institute, is battling Jack Martin, 205-pounder from Toledo, Ohio, for the starting center position on the Navy team. Second yearman Whittle, who weighs 185 and stands 5-11, is a resident of Martinsville, Va.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New Work, Oct. 19.—Navy's football team left Annapolis yesterday for a 600-mile sleeper jump to Atlanta, where the Midshipmen play Georgia Tech Saturday.

The Navy team and its gear will cover more than 1200 miles, using up two or three Pullman cars, a baggage coach, trucks, buses and cabs before it gets back to Annapolis early next week. All of which makes sense, and helps broaden the future admirals.

CONSIDINE

But the whole trip makes a mockery out of the rule which will confine the Army-Navy game to Annapolis, to ease the strain on the country's transportation system. It is all right for Navy to take a 1200-mile trip in October but wrong for it to travel 120 miles to Philadelphia in December to play against Army in a game which would draw 102,000 and could be instrumental in raising nearly a half million dollars for war relief and perhaps in selling five billion dollars in War Bonds.

In fact, according to the reasoning of the War and Navy Departments who have ordered the Army-Navy game to be played in Annapolis—where tickets will be limited to persons living within a 10-mile radius of the city and the attendance may be little more than 10,000—it would be wrong for the Navy team to travel even 30 miles to Baltimore, where the Army-Navy game could at least be witnessed by 65,000 in the Baltimore Municipal Stadium. It will be perfectly okay for Navy to play Notre Dame, Cornell and Purdue at Baltimore, but not Army.

We have made an effort to find out the man behind the order which will keep the Army-Navy game a geographical secret. Most of the roads lead to Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson, though he has the support of certain Navy officials—including, presumably, the ones who had something to do with authorizing the trip to Atlanta.

Right or wrong, a surprising number of Americans judge a school by the way it conducts its athletes. For instance, a school can be quite sound from an educational standpoint yet reek a bit throughout the country if its football club is obviously made up of coscripts.

It follows that great institutions such as West Point and Annapolis excite a general bewilderment by letting themselves become a party to th eccentric reasoning which condones such trips as Navy is making this weekendtrips which will benefit only the Naval Academy and Georgia Tech athletic funds—and yet frustrates the season's best game, Army versus Navy.

This is no crack against Navy's trip. It's great. Too bad the rigid scholastic and military training program of the academies does not permit the clubs to travel much more extensively than they do—and to take along the Cadets ad Midshipmen with them, to march and cheer. The sight of a service team, with its marching and shouting background, is an unforgettable one, a scene that fills the onlooker with pride in the country and the officer-nucleus of its future armed forces.

But if you can make an iota of sense out of playing the Army-Navy game in Annapolis, instead of staging it some place where the boys themselves want it, where the taxpayers want it, and where it will help the war effort, please drop me a lin. I'm honestly baffled.

The filly Top Flight won $275,000, more than any racing heroine i nturf history. She won $219,000 of that sum as a 2-year-old, when she took the Belmont and the Pimlico Futurities, two classics which brought her $150,950.

The $150,950 Top Flight won in two races topped the lifetime winnings of a filly which many old timers swear was the greatest the class ever saw. That would be Miss Woodford, who ran in the 1880's and became the first mare ever to win $100,000. Miss Woodford, owned by Mike and Phil Dwyer, Brooklyn butchers, won 37 of her 48 starts an dwas out of the money only twice in her career.

Two current fillies have a chance of topping Top Flight. They are Warren Wright's Twilight Tear, of course, and Louis B. Mayer's Whirlabout. The Tear has won $176,400, Whirlabout $106,000. Both may race in California this winter, where Santa Anita is going to put on its $50,000 Santa Margarita Handicap and Hollywood Park is going to put on [illegible] a total of $45,000. The turf is getting kinder to the lady horses by putting up such purses.

American Pro Football Head Sees Bright Future for Loop

Los Angeles, Oct. 15 (AP).—The newly formed American Professional Football League is having its troubles but President Freelove, an optimist at heart, thinks everything is going to come out all right—at least after the war.

Eight of the original 10 teams are still in there pitching and Freelove says the owners have spent $300,000 out of their pockets to get half way through the season. There's another $300,000 waiting and ready to put right on the line, just in case, so that the schedule will be carried out.

The League is guaranteeing Al Davis, owner of the Portland Bombers, against financial losses for the rest of the season and money will be chunked in to keep the San Diego Club going.

"We're figuring on a long-range program," Freelove explained. "We intend to stay in the picture. There is room for one pro football league on the Pacific Coast. There are two. (The other is the Pacific Coast League.) Eventually, in a few years, we think pro football can outdraw the colleges."

As Freelove see things, they aren't so black as might be imagined. Attendance, although spotty, is over last year's. The average in Los Angeles, has been 6500, and Freelove thinks it may continue low for 2 or even 3 years "because there are many competing attractions in Southern California."

Bill thinks an absence of "name" players isn't one of the reasons for sparse crowds. Mebbe not, but there are a lot of Smiths and Jones on the programs. One week in San Diego there were 17 former All-America performers on the field. Who were they? They'd be hard to identify. Some were servicemen picking up extra cash under assumed names, for the military doesn't approve.

If the spectators had known what a high class of performers were out there giving their best, they might have been impressed.

Clubs are operating in Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, Oakland and Hollywood. Los Angeles has two teams.

Billy Conn Leaves Paris for Ring Tour Of Mediterranean

Paris, Oct. 19 (AP).—Billy Conn, esrtwhile chief contender for the world's heavyweight crown but currently a sergeant in the U. S. Army Air Force, left Paris today for a ring tour of the Mediterranean fronts but promised French reporters he would return soon to meet Joe Louis in an exhibition.

Conn said the fight show would be put on in the Palais des Sports.

"Louis is a great champion," Conn told a "Liberation" reporter, "but I am sure that I will beat him when I meet him again for the title after the war."

Louis, also a sergeant in the Army, recently returned to the U. S. following an exhibition tour in the European war theater. The champion and Conn fought in the New York Polo Grounds, June 19, 1941, with Louis knocking out the Pittsburgh challenger in the thirteenth round although behind on points until then.

Eastern Br. Boys Club Honor Baseball Champs

Eastern Branch Boys Club will honor its three city championship baseball teams with a banquet and the awarding of prizes Friday, October 20, at 8 p. m. Several prominent baseball figures have been invited, including George McQuinn, St. Louis Browns' star, and Veteran Umpire Bill McGowan.

Awards will be made to batting champions in each league and for the "most valuable player" in the midget, pee wee and insect leagues. Individual baseball charms will be presented to the 50 players composing the three clubs.

Head Smart, Mills Up, Wins At Jamaica

Jamaica Racetrack, Oct. 19 (AP).—Buddy Mills, an apprentice lad who has improved steadily in recent weeks, and Milton Slifkin's heavily-campaigned filly Head Smart shared the honors here this afternoon. This combination scored a long shot victory in the three-way photo finish of the featured Fairview Purse, for 2-year-old fillies.

It was the third score on the card for Mills, a youngster brought along by Hirsch Jacobs, his employer. However, none of Mills' winners today represented Jacobs, as it happened.

Head Smart, whose most successful efforts had been in high class claiming events, rallied from last place in the field of 10 to prevail by a head at $48.30 for $2. Two other outsiders were second and third. Mrs. H. C. Phipp's Turbulence and the W-L Ranch's Rea's Agent followed Head Smart over the line as named. The winner was timed in 1:13 4 5 for the six furlongs.

The attendance was 21,801.

Mills' earlier winners on the card were Valetta, $11.60, and Cheesestraw, $10.80. He missed winning the second race with Hannah B., which finished second at $8.90 for place.

William Helis' Rhodian, the favorite in the headliner, was a bitter pill for the talent to swallow. She broke well, but after sampling the early pace of Rea's agent, quickly dropped out of the picture. Rea's Agent held a daylight lead to the stretch, weakening in the last furlong. Head Smart, still last after a quarter mile, responded with a rush under Mills' urging. Sixth around the bend, she drove up on the outside of the tiring Rea's Agent and the spurting Turbulence through the stretch, her bid coming just in time.

Mungo Sees Winning Year With Giants

Pageland, S. C., Oct. 19 (AP).—Van Lingle Mungo, the former stormy petrel of the majors, says he is going to win a lot of ball games for the New York Giants next season.

The veteran fireballer returned home today after being discharged from the Navy because of an injury to his knee which he suffered back in 1941. He received his release at Fort McPherson, Ga., and came on here to spend the winter months. He had been in uniform since January.

"I feel fine," said Mungo, and he looked it. "I'm down to 219, my regular pitching weights, and my arm feels fine."

The one-time bad boy of the Brooklyn Dodgers said that he chalked up 18 victories against 3 defeats while pitching for the Camp Atterbury, Ind., service team during the past summer. He said he also hung up a new strikeout record in the semiprofessional tournament at Wichita, Kans., the past summer when he retired 17 batters in seven innings.

"I feel like I am going to win a lot of ball games for the Giants next season," said Mungo when he was asked about his plans for next year. In 1943 he won three and lost seven for the Giants.

1920 Plotters Still Control GOP, Cox Says

Dayton O., Oct. 29 (AP).—James M. Cox, a staunch advocate of the League of Nations which the U. S. Senate rejected after the last war, declared tonight "the powers that directed the conspiracy of 1920 control the Republican Party still."

The former Ohio governor and Democratic Presidential nominee who campaigned in 1920 on a platform calling for participation in the league, urged the re-election of President Roosevelt, saying:

"The Allied Nations which are winning the war together must lead in winning the peace together. And that trio, Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin, whose united leadership is winning the war, are not they, standing together, the best guarantee of the victory for peace for which our people yearn?"

Speaking on a coast-to-coast CBS broadcast sponsored by the Democratic National Committee Cox said in a prepared text released by his office:

People to Decide

"The American people are to decide whether, at the crisis of the war and the hour of opportunity for the peace, we are to dissolve the leadership which has brought us thus far so gloriously on our way. I believe our people know their duty too well to desert this great cause now."

He asserted that a "minority of Senators" blocked America's entrance into the League in 1920, and the Republican convention adopted that year a "platform ambiguous enough to insure a Republican President by gaining the support of both friends of the peace and isolationists."

He added:

"It could be interpreted, as Wendell Willkie said the 1944 plank of that party could be, as either isolationist or for the peace. To allay the doubts whic hthis 1920 platform aroused, a group of eminent pro-peace Republicans were induced to sign a promise that their party would be a path to peace. . . . by their act, millions of Republican voters were misled. The election won, Harding proclaimed the League dead. Harding deserted our Allies, made a separate peace with Germany. There the record stands.

"You will note that no such array of independent Republicans, devoted to peace, has come forward to vouch for their present candidate. The burnt child dreads the fire.

Assails Isolationists

"Now to the present: the same doubtful platform, the same reassuring words by the candidate. Behind it all, the powers that directed the conspiracy of 1920 control the Republican Party still. In fear of the patriotic and peace-loving Republican voters, they will again conceal their plans till their chance to act has come. . .

"We must be vigilant if we are not again to be betrayed."

Cox declared there were "varieties of isolationists—some who believe sincerely we should not share in problems of the world, others whom he called the "economic isolationist."

"It was he," Cox declared, "who carried through the 1920 plot. It was he who, in the period before and throughout the Republican convention, spurned Wendell Willkie and sent him, in the flower of his manhood, to his grave, a broken-hearted man. He chose, not Wendell Willkie, but Herbert Hoover to speak the party creed. Willkie was the one man in whom peace-loving independent Republicans had put their trust that their party could be kept, in the present emergency, on the path t opeace. When he died, their hope was lost."

Mrs. Bunker Hill's 83-Net Takes Title In Manor Club Golf

Mrs. Bunker Hill and Mrs. John R. Daily captured top honors in the ladies' annual field day golr tournament yesterday at the Manor Country Club.

Mrs. Daily fired a 96 to take low gross honors, and Mrs. Hill's 83-net won low net prize. Mrs. Daily toured the outgoing nine in 47 and returned in 49 to compile her card.

Mrs. Hill was tied for low net with two other players and was awarded the title on the draw of the cards. Mrs. J. Bullock and Mrs. C. Morrill each turned in 83 nets.

Mrs. W. C. Gamrath walked off with the inside nine blind bogey crown with a net 53. She traversed the nine holes in 75 and, with a 22 handicap, turned in the lowest card.

Intimidation to Obtain Votes Charged to PAC by Bricker

Bakersfield, Calif., Oct. 19 (AP).—Gov. John W. Bricker said today he had been informed that agents of the Political Action Committee had launched a "campaign of threats and intimidation" to line up labor voters for the New Deal.

"The implication of all this," said the Republican candidate for Vice President, "is that if those workers do not vote for Mr. Roosevelt they will lose their jobs—or will fail to get better jobs—or will be let out first when war production ends—or will not be able to get peace-time jobs."

The Ohio governor, winding up a six-day campaign for California's 25 electoral votes after an unprecedented demonstration by supporters at Los Angeles, said no voter should allow himself to be intimidated.

"To those workers and any others who have been approached in this manner," he added in a prepared speech released by his campaign staff, "I want to give this assurance. We still have a secret ballot in this country. When you enter the voting booth, you enter it alone. There is no possible way for anybody to know how you vote without committing an election fraud or crime. You are not required to tell anybody how you vote—and no one can compel you to do so."

Bricker "Terrified"

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, said today that Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, Republican vice presidential nominee, was making "charges of a candidate gone wild with fear at the sight of the grim spectre of defeat constantly stalking him and his running mate."

Replying to Bricker's Bakersfield, Calif., address, Hillman said in a formal statement that "Governor Bricker knows that he has no evidence to prove this or any of the othe rwild charges he has been making about PAC in this campaign. The FBI has twice investigated PAC, the Senate Committee on Campaign Expenditures has investigated and so has the House Committee on Campaign Expenditures. No one has ever been able to find a single specific instance to prove PAC coercion.

"Plainly Governor Bricker is terrified at the size of registration, and of the job that PAC has helped to do to get millions of citizens to register . . . He's terrified, because he knows what will happen with a heavy vote. He smells defeat."

45 Million Civilians Expected To Cast Presidential Votes

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 19.—The 1944 presidential election campaign, which started slowly, has now shot into high gear.

On the basis of latest figures from areas where registration has been completed, including New York City, it now appears that an estimated 45 million civilian voters will turn out to vote on election day. This figure may be revised upward or downward when complete registration figures from other areas are available.

The armed services vote has been estimated at somewhere between 2,500,000 to three million. The indications thus are that the total vote to be cast in 1944 will be slightly under the nearly 50 million total of 1940.

A large turnout can normally be expected to help the Democrats, but despite this fact the election, on the basis of Institute public opinion sampling survey, looks to be almost a toss-up.

While Institute surveys show President Roosevelt having a 51 per cent-49 per cent advantage in the division of popular votes, poll returns now show sentiment so evenly divided in five large industrial States on the Eastern seaboard — Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Connecticut—that a shift of but 1 or 2 per cent could throw all of them to Dewey.

Should the Republican candidate take all of these five States which are now at or around the 50-50 line, and retain those States where he is indicated to be leading, he would win the election with 287 electoral votes.

On the other hand, if FDR should win these States, he could win handsomely in electoral votes even though the division of the popular vote is extremely close percentagewise. His total would be 341 electoral votes to Dewey's 190.

The reason for this of course is that a candidate who gets a majority—no matter how slim—in any State, gets the entire electoral vote of the State.

Because the election is likely to be won or lost in these five States, the chief efforts of both parties will be concentrated there between now and election day.

Texas League Moguls To Meet Over Weekend

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 19 (AP).—Texas League Club owners will meet here this weekend to consider resuming operations in 1945, President J. Alvin Gardner said today.

He added their decision will not be disclosed until the minor league convention at Buffalo, N. Y., December 6-8. The league hasn't operated for two years.

Rohde to Meet Garibaldi on Mat

Dutch Rohde, No. 3 in challenger ratings, last night agreed to meet Gino Garibaldi, speedy Italian star, next Wednesday night in the main grapple at Turner's Arena. It will be Garibaldi's first appearance here in several months.

Rohde is being given a chance by Promoter Joe Turner to continue in the heavyweight contention despite his defeat by the Swedish Angel Wednesday night. The Angel took over the No. 1 spot as challenger as a result of this triumph, with Rohde dropping from No. 1 to the third post. Sandor Szabo remains as No. 2 contender for Babe Sharkey's crown. Garibaldi is rated No. 7.

Output Lag May Delay VE-Day Indefinitely, Krug Warns

By Ben W. Gilbert

J. A. Krug, chairman of the War Production Board, warned yesterday that VE Day may be delayed "an indefinite number of months" unless certain critical lagging programs are pushed "over the hump."

At a press conference, the 36-year-old WPB chairman appealed to the producers of these critical programs "to keep the heat on for three or four months more."

Krug emphasized that the overall war picture was good, but that about 10 per cent of the program was lagging.

Specific Figures Given

Giving specific figures on the individual programs, Hiland G. Batcheller, Krug's chief of operations, warned that "VE-Day might never come," if the general public gets the impression that victory is "in the bag" and permits the lagging programs to be neglected.

He listed shortages in military trucks, tires, bombs, big shells, dry-cell batteries, a special type of tank, electronics esuipment and combat-loaded transport ships.

Batcheller said that 50,000 people would volunteer for Red Cross work in the event of a flood, yet the dry cell battery program is hampered by a shortage of 4500 workers, some of them needed only part time.

Charges Trivial Interests

"People are more interested in the number of bathtubs and neckties they are going to buy than in finishing the war job," he commented.

Krug reported that WPB regional directors have advised him that people in many areas think we have all the production we need.

"This is the most critical period to keep production flowing," Krug emphasized, 'to keep plenty of materials moving to the West Wall."

Claims Operations Limited

Shortages of tires and heavy trucks are limiting the operations of the Army's "Redball Express," which moves supplies across France to the fighting fronts, Batcheller said.

To keep the trucks supplied with heavy tires, production of combat "runflat" tires which are usable even after they are shot up, has been curtailed, Batcheller said.

"The Redball Express is rolling 40 miles an hour, seven days a week, night and day," Batcheller said. "It couldn't run if we didn't cut production of combat tires."

Phils Sign Another Of Va. Hamners

Philadelphia, Oct. 19 (AP).—Another of the Hamners of Virginia joined the National League Phillies today.

General Manager Herb Pennock announced that Garvin Hamner, 20, brother of rookie shortstop Granville, has accepted a club offer. Granville signed shortly before the season closed and Pennock and others have called him "a baseball wizard." Both are from Richmond.

Garvin also is a shortstop. He played with the Richmond team in the Piedmont League last season and the season before. He signed with the New York Giants, but later was made a free agent.

Illini Back Totes Ball As Fumbling Cure

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 19 (AP).—Paul Patterson, star University of Illinois freshman halfback, is keeping a football close to him this week—a program he hopes will cure him of fumbling in future games.

The Illini have suffered setbacks in early games by fumbling, with no less than eight being charged against them in the Purdue defeat. Patterson, the chief offender in that contest. decided he'd keep a pigskin in his hands at all times and he lugs one from class to class in strolling across the campus.

Washington StateAdopts 2d AAF Superbombers

Pullman, Wash., Oct. 19 (AP).—Washington State College, which abandoned football a year ago, has adopted the Second Air Force Superbombers and plans to make the University of Washington-Superbomber tilt at Spokane November 18 the school's "big game" of the year.

The student body has reserved a section in Gonzaga Stadium for the event. The Pullman delegation will take to Spokane the college and, cheer leaders and "Butch," the live Cougar mascot.

Michigan's Bob Wiese Not to Play Against Penn

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 19 (AP).—Bob Wiese, Michigan football captain and fullback, a Navy trainee, does not plan to play with the team at Philadelphia against the University of Pennsylvania November 4, it was disclosed today.

Under original plans Wiese was expected to be available for the Penn game, which is played the day before he is due to report at Asbury Park, N. J., for premidshipman training. His final college game now is expected to be the contest with Purdue here October 25.

Watch Theft Case Sent to Grand Jury

Judge James Reece Duncan in Alexandria Civil and Police Court yesterday ordered charges of grand larceny, in the theft of a wrist watch, against Bessie Ayers, 32, of 321 S. Patrick st., Alexandria, referred to the grand jury in Alexandria Corporation Court following a preliminary hearing.

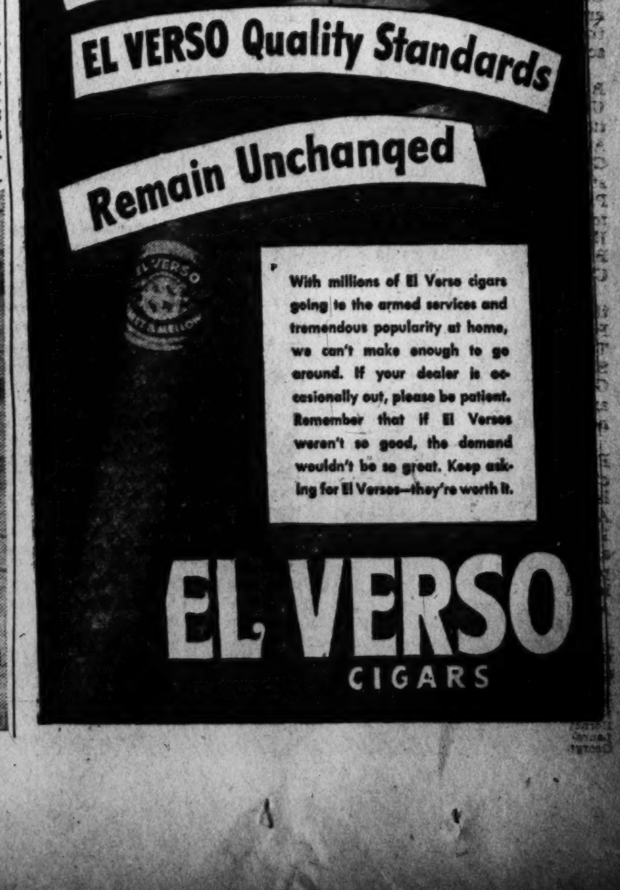

A complaint against the woman for the theft of the watch which he valued at $40 was filed by Gardner Tesh of 720 N. Columbus st., who said the theft occurred on the night of October 5 at King and Royal sts., where he had her arrested.

Released under $1000 bond, the woman who told police she has no occupation, is being represented by J. Randolph Davis, Alexandria attorney.

Girl, 14, Reared by Aunt Since Mother's Death, Pines for More Freedom of Action Than She Is Granted; Fights Bitterness

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am nearly 15 and I have a serious problem. Since my mother died several years ago, I have been living with my aunt. I have always loved my aunt and still do, but in the last year it seems she has no love for me.

I did have plenty of friends my age, and after school they would ask me to go out with them. But I can't; my aunt won't let me; so I have to say, "No," or make up an excuse. Just to give you an idea, —my best girl friend asked me to go to the movies with her one Saturday afternoon, from 4 to 8 o'clock. I was very nervous about asking my aunt; and when I did ask, she yelled: "No! Stay at home and eat your supper."

My aunt has children of her own, and one cousin is about my age. Very seldom can I go any place unless my cousin goes there, too, with her friends. Things have reached a point where my friends don't ask me to go places with them any more, except to school; and frankly, I don't blame them. I try very hard not to feel bitter against my aunt, but sometimes I just can't help it. I hope I have made the problem clear. M. B.

Aunt's Attitude Shows Devotion

DEAR M. B.: You are in a difficult position, yes; but so is your aunt. And while you may find her impatient and unsympathetic, I am sure she finds you something of a worry and a trial, too,—probably very self-centered, at your present age; and inclined to sulk, if you don't get your way. I don't agree that your aunt shows lack of devotion, in keeping you on a tight rein this past year. I think her policy is that respect gives evidence, rather, of genuine concern for your welfare.

If your mother had lived to handle your rearing, you might have found her equally firm about keeping you off the streets and under her wing, during your early teens. Taking a cross-section of average families in any community, in all walks of life, I imagine that you would find that, out of 100 different sets of parents, maybe 40 are letting their children do as they please about killing time, when not in school,—and doing as they please usually means running in packs with their cronies, going to movies, etc., as if their life depended on it.

Better Parents Aren't Softies

THE OTHER 60 per cent of parents, in all walks of life, will be rather strictly opposed to the idea of their children,—of junior high school age or thereabouts,—being constantly "on the go" with a gang. And the more a youngster fusses for that bootless liberty, the more stern the conscientious parent is apt to become, in putting his foot down against it. The responsibly minded parent is not impressed by the whining argument, "Other kids do it; why can't I?" That argument addressed to the conscientious parent defeats its purpose, by putting him wise to the fact that his child is acquiring a wrong set of values from certain youngsters whose parents don't bother to restrain and guide their leisure activities. So then he says, "No," with double emphasis,—because it is this undisciplined type of associate that he doesn't want his child to cultivate.

You say it's very seldom you can go out, except in company of your cousin and her friends. I gather you feel that your aunt is meanly favoring her daughter and unjustly discriminating against you. But I wonder if that is the true explanation. The truth may be that your cousin's friends are better chosen, more reliable, than your current selection of boon companions. Or maybe they are a year or two younger,—not yet arrived at the "silly age." Or perhaps a year or so older, and safely coming out of it. However, if your special friends are above reproach, your aunt should be willing to let you go with them occasionally to a holiday afternoon movie,—but early enough to be home before dark. Still, I don't think you are being abused in having to submit to considerable chaperonage at your age. I don't think you are missing anything worthwhile in not getting to run at the heels of a restless gang.

Women in a Hurry

News Item—Fashion authorities predict the additional use of jewelry and of white, beige, or gray gloves as furthering the leisurely "gracious lady" way of life the new clothes demand. They point out that these outfits are not for the brisk woman who is constantly in a hurry.

WHAT I want to know is, what are all of us women in a hurry going to wear?

What is going to be done for those of us who see no chance during the next year and a half of war, or for an unpredictable number of years of peace, to return to the leisurely "gracious lady" way of living?

What of us who realize that, if we are to prevent the children of today being engulfed in another war, or being bowed under armament taxes and civilian regimentation, we can't afford to indulge our notalgia for a white glove and ostrich boa type of existence?

YES, we know it is not glamorous to be in a hurry. We know that as Sir Charles Greville admonished Lady Hamilton, "No lady is ever in a hurry." We regret that we have to be so brisk and energetic but—we have to catch buses and streetcars, get to our offices and run a race with the clock doing our daily stints, do our marketing and our housework, and hunt all over town for a half pound of butter or some outing flannel nightgowns for the children.

Naturally, we can't wear barrels to do these things—or swishing satins and trailing plumes. And naturally, we view with alarm the clothing advertisers' phrase of the day "on the threshold of a new era of fashions," especially when we realize that this means clothes of the "after five" variety, for the "lady of leisure." What, may we inquire, are we to wear "before 5?" How are those of us who are ladies without leisure to garb ourselves?

WE HAVEN'T anything against white gloves—as gloves. We respect them for their superb job of social climbing—from being the badge of the woman who wasn't a lady to becoming the hallmark of the one who was. We like their democracy (we wear them ourselves and wash them out at night in our bathrooms). But as a symbol of feminine life of the future, we are against them. They smack too much of the woman who can't touch anything, let alone do anything.

We don't mind ostrich feather hats or even boas, nor pearl dog collars, nor fur muffs, nor aigrettes, nor jet fringe, nor similar aids to the gracious lady way of living—though we've never noticed that the women who wore them were particularly gracious. But we do ask that some clothes also be designed for the women who are in a hurry—and we don't mean either sport or grandmother clothes either.

MOST of all we'd like some shoes in which we could run for buses, cover miles of shopping territory, stand in when we wait in restaurant lines, and which would also possess more grace and finesse than the ones that demand a uniform or a tweed suit. We think it time that women, in this active era, quit trying to carry on the fiction that they all ride in coaches or even in taxicabs.

We'd also like some better designs in washable dresses—which of course won't interest the gracious ladies. We'd like more coats and dresses with the cost put into the fabric and the tailoring rather than into the fur and glitter. We'd like skirts that gave freedom of movement without falling in ripples and swirls and—heaven prevent—pleats that have to be pressed.

We understand that designers try to foresee and meet the daily living needs of the women who are to wear the clothes of tomorrow. If they try to put American women for the next few months or years into clothes suitable for divan recliners and social parasites, then they will have guessed badly. It would mean better business for them to figure out something for the woman in a hurry—because there are going to be a great many of her.

All new Delta Zetas are invited. Reservations should be made not later than tomorrow by calling either Mrs. Leonard Meadows, Georgia 2370, or Mrs. C. D. Schoolcraft, GLebe 6205, according to Miss Lyon.

Townsends Here Visiting Mrs. Carr

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who have been at their summer home at Schroon Lake, N. Y., are in Washington, their former home, for a few days and are guests of Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr.

Mr. and Mrs. Townsend will be here until Monday when they will leave for Florida to spend the winter, as is their custom since giving up their house here.

Gaylord Deserts Actress At Home Town Opening

By Genevieve Reynolds

You'd think that when a lady lands a part in a play, her best love would stick around to applaud. But not Gaylord. He just ups and trots away on opening night. To make matters worse, it's in the actress' home town.

Yep, that's what happened to Natalie Hammond Core, featured player in Channing Pollock's melodrama, "Tangled Web," currently at the National Theater.

Blonde Natalie is mighty fond of Gaylord. Many times he's howled or barked approval of her stage bits here in the city. Remember when she played in "Ladies in Retirement"—Blackfriar production—a few seasons ago?

Gathers Dog Cortege

The miniature German Shepherd dog not only stuck by but gathered canines of all descriptions to thump their tails. So loud was the approval of the animals that audiences swore the whole thing, literally, had gone to the dogs.

Confessing that she was plenty nervous to play in Washington—her home town—Miss Core just couldn't understand why Gaylord should desert her. At first, she thought he had gone out to drum up rooters. When the final curtain fell and she returned backstage to find Gaylord still missing, she concluded that he was plain unfaithful.

Miss Core, descendant of the late John Hays Hammond, has starred in melodramas about town. She has played several seasons at the Roadside, Civic Theaters as well as the Willard Roof summer shows.

Was Radio Announcer

"It must have been a melodramatic moment when I was born," she comments. "I can't seem to get away from melodrama."

Tall, statuesque Natalie has radio experience—she was the first woman announcer on the Blue Network stations. However, she's beaming over her first part in a play that seems headed for Broadway. Her greatest ambition is to star in a play written by her mother with the stage set designed by her sister. "Mother was an actress," she explains, "now she's trying her hand at writing plays and my sister is an interior decorator."

Proceeds will help meet the council's philanthropic obligations. Members of the armed forces will be admitted without charge.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Hoosier Pays First Visit to Capital; Wined, Dined in Cosmopolitan Way

One of the advantages of living in Washington is that you can be cosmopolitan in food selection. This is one of the things that Miss Marilyn Vonderschmitt, society editor of the Washington Herald, Washington, Ind., especially likes about our Capital.

Martha Ellyn

Marilyn came to Washington for the first time about one week ago, to be the guest of her publisher, Maj. Paul R. Bausman, Chemical Warfare Service, and Mrs. Bausman. She's been wined and dined and enjoyed being on the guest side of life rather than a reporter covering parties.

It has been quite an adventure for Marilyn to have the opportunity to eat at Chinese, Italian and Russian restaurants. Back in her Hoosier home town the eating places usually serve fried, baked and stewed chicken with dumplings or steaks. Yes they still have steaks available. And this visitor reports that you can still go into a grocery and buy a pound of butter, if you have the points. But she says that many persons buy margarine because of the high point value on butter.

Flavor's the Thing

Another new experience to Marilyn was when she learned that her hostess adds a commercial product to margarine to give it that butter flavor. This flavoring is not a new product for it has been used in some sections of the country for a long time. But it seems to be a newcomer to Washington. However, this flavoring I've learned is being used successfully by quite a few Washington cooks. One homemaker was kind enough to give me a bottle of it and I immediately put it to work.

When I inquired of Miss Vonderschmitt the dishes she especially liked, she named chicken muscovite she ate at a Russian restaurant, spaghetti with meat balls and its superb sauce, she enjoyed at an Italian restaurant, and egg rolls, fresh shrimps in lobster sauce, fried rice and Egg Foo Yong came in for special praise.

So that this Midwesterner can duplicate these Chinese dishes when she returns home, I secured for her the authentic Chinese recipes which follow:

FRESH SHRIMPS WITH LOBSTER SAUCE

Sear 1 cup ground fresh ham in greased large shallow pan. Add 1 cup rich chicken broth and 1 cup fresh green shrimps. Cover and cook on hot fire for three or four minutes, stirring occasionally to avoid burning. Add salt to taste, and 1 teaspoon bead molasses while still stirring. Add 1 teaspoon soy sauce, stir in 1 egg rapidly, thicken to sauce consistency with cornstarch. Serve hot. Complete cooking time—7 to 10 minutes.

FRIED RICE.

Mix well 2 cups steamed rice, ½ cup chopped meats (chicken or shellfish), ½ cup chopped vegetables (water chestnuts, bamboo shoots, mushrooms, scallions, pimientos), a little salt, pinch of sugar, ½ teaspoon bead molasses. Add a small amount cooking oil and pan fry over medium hot fire, stirring to avoid burning. Cooking time—5 to 7 minutes.

EGG FOO YONG

Beat four eggs and a little chicken stock together; add salt to taste; mix in vegetables (bamboo shoots, water-chestnuts, celery, scallions, pimientos) and one-half cup chopped cold meats, chicken or shellfish, and gently ladle into hot deep fat. Fry to texture desired. Serve dry or with brown sauce and rice.

The food served at social gatherings in Washington, Ind., this society reporter says, has become very simple. The clubs are devoting most of their time to Red Cross or knitting and sewing for the war agencies. However, one woman who gave a party was eager to have her menu printed. The food items were given but in reporting the dessert, the society editor omitted "with whipped cream." The woman called to ask why the reporter had not used the whipped cream.

THE COSMOPOLITAN FOODS served at Washington dining spots are a new adventure for Miss Maryilyn Vonderschmitt, society editor from Washington, Ind. It's also a pleasant change for her to take part in preparing for guests instead of writing about social affairs

B'nai B'rith Group to Meet

8 Civic Groups Indorse Mason

The appeal last month of Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.) to civic organizations of the District to let the Senate District Committee know how they regard Commissioner Guy Mason has produced eight indorsements of his nomination for another term, it was announced yesterday by Edward P. Terry, committee secretary.

The committee expects to act on the nomination after Congress reconvenes November 14. Opposition has been threatened by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) and three other members of the committee who recommended Mason's immediate removal from office last October following an investigation of conditions at Gallinger Hospital.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 14, Reared by Aunt Since Mother's Death, Pines for More Freedom of Action Than She Is Granted; Fights Bitterness

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am nearly 15 and I have a serious problem. Since my mother died several years ago, I have been living with my aunt. I have always loved my aunt and still do, but in the last year it seems she has no love for me.

I did have plenty of friends my age, and after school they would ask me to go out with them. But I can't; my aunt won't let me; so I have to say, "No," or make up an excuse. Just to give you an idea, —my best girl friend asked me to go to the movies with her one Saturday afternoon, from 4 to 8 o'clock. I was very nervous about asking my aunt; and when I did ask, she yelled: "No! Stay at home and eat your supper."

My aunt has children of her own, and one cousin is about my age. Very seldom can I go any place unless my cousin goes there, too, with her friends. Things have reached a point where my friends don't ask me to go places with them any more, except to school; and frankly, I don't blame them. I try very hard not to feel bitter against my aunt, but sometimes I just can't help it. I hope I have made the problem clear. M. B.

Aunt's Attitude Shows Devotion

DEAR M. B.: You are in a difficult position, yes; but so is your aunt. And while you may find her impatient and unsympathetic, I am sure she finds you something of a worry and a trial, too,—probably very self-centered, at your present age; and inclined to sulk, if you don't get your way. I don't agree that your aunt shows lack of devotion, in keeping you on a tight rein this past year. I think her policy is that respect gives evidence, rather, of genuine concern for your welfare.

If your mother had lived to handle your rearing, you might have found her equally firm about keeping you off the streets and under her wing, during your early teens. Taking a cross-section of average families in any community, in all walks of life, I imagine that you would find that, out of 100 different sets of parents, maybe 40 are letting their children do as they please about killing time, when not in school,—and doing as they please usually means running in packs with their cronies, going to movies, etc., as if their life depended on it.

Better Parents Aren't Softies

THE OTHER 60 per cent of parents, in all walks of life, will be rather strictly opposed to the idea of their children,—of junior high school age or thereabouts,—being constantly "on the go" with a gang. And the more a youngster fusses for that bootless liberty, the more stern the conscientious parent is apt to become, in putting his foot down against it. The responsibly minded parent is not impressed by the whining argument, "Other kids do it; why can't I?" That argument addressed to the conscientious parent defeats its purpose, by putting him wise to the fa.: that his child is acquiring a wrong set of values from certain youngsters whose parents don't bother to restrain and guide their leisure activities. So then he says, "No," with double emphasis,—because it is this undisciplined type of associate that he doesn't want his child to cultivate.

You say it's very seldom you can go out, except in company of your cousin and her friends. I gather you feel that your aunt is meanly favoring her daughter and unjustly discriminating against you. But I wonder if that is the true explanation. The truth may be that your cousin's friends are better chosen, more reliable, than your current selection of boon companions. Or maybe they are a year or two younger,—not yet arrived at the "silly age." Or perhaps a year or so older, and safely coming out of it. However, if your special friends are above reproach, your aunt should be willing to let you go with them occasionally to a holiday afternoon movie,—but early enough to be home before dark. Still, I don't think you are being abused in having to submit to considerable chaperonage at your age. I don't think you are missing anything worthwhile in not getting to run at the heels of a restless gang.

M. H.

Women in a Hurry

News Item—Fashion authorities predict the additional use of jewelry and of white, beige, or gray gloves as furthering the leisurely "gracious lady" way of life the new clothes demand. They point out that these outfits are not for the brisk woman who is constantly in a hurry.

WHAT I want to know is, what are all of us women in a hurry going to wear?

What is going to be done for those of us who see no chance during the next year and a half of war, or for an unpredictable number of years of peace, to return to the lelsurely "gracious lady" way of living?

What of us who realize that, if we are to prevent the children of today being engulfed in another war, or being bowed under armament taxes and civilian regimentation, we can't afford to indulge our notalgia for a white glove and ostrich boa type of existence?

YES, we know it is not glamorous to be in a hurry. We know that as Sir Charles Greville admonished Lady Hamilton, "No lady is ever in a hurry." We regret that we have to be so brisk and energetic but—we have to catch buses and streetcars, get to our offices and run a race with the clock doing our daily stints, do our marketing and our housework, and hunt all over town for a half pound of butter or some outing flannel nightgowns for the children.

Naturally, we can't wear barrels to do these things—or swishing satins and frailing plumes. And naturally, we view with alarm the clothing advertisers' phrase of the day "on the threshold of a new era of fashions," especially when we realize that this means clothes of the "after five" variety, for the "lady of leisure." What, may we inquire, are we to wear "before 5?" How are those of us who are ladies without leisure to garb ourselves?

WE HAVEN'T anything against white gloves—as gloves. We respect them for their superb job of social climbing—from being the badge of the woman who wasn't a lady to becoming the hallmark of the one who was. We like their democracy (we wear them ourselves and wash them out at night in our bathrooms). But as a symbol of feminine life of the future, we are against them. They smack too much of the woman who can't touch anything, let alone do anything.

We don't mind ostrich feather hats or even boas, nor pearl dog collars, nor fur muffs, nor aigrettes, nor jet fringe, nor similar aids to the gracious lady way of living—though we've never noticed that the women who wore them were particularly gracious. But we do ask that some clothes also be designed for the women who are in a hurry—and we don't mean either sport or grandmother clothes either.

MOST of all we'd like some shoes in which we could run for buses, cover miles of shopping territory, stand in when we wait in restaurant lines, and which would also possess more grace and finesse than the ones that demand a uniform or a tweed suit. We think it time that women, in this active era, quit trying to carry on the fiction that they all ride in coaches or even in taxicabs.

We'd also like some better designs in washable dresses—which of course won't interest the gracious ladies. We'd like more coats and dresses with the cost put into the fabric and the tailoring rather than into the fur and glitter. We'd like skirts that gave freedom of movement without falling in ripples and swirls and—heaven prevent—pleats that have to be pressed.

We understand that designers try to foresee and meet the daily living needs of the women who are to wear the clothes of tomorrow. If they try to put American women for the next few months or years into clothes suitable for divan recliners and social parasites, then they will have guessed badly. It would mean better business for them to figure out something for the woman in a hurry—because there are going to be a great many of her.

All new Delta Zetas are invited. Reservations should be made not later than tomorrow by calling either Mrs. Leonard Meadows, Georgia 2370, or Mrs. C. D. Schoolcraft, GLebe 6205, according to Miss Lyon.

Townsends Here Visiting Mrs. Carr

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who have been at their summer home at Schroon Lake, N. Y., are in Washington, their former home, for a few days and are guests of Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr.

Mr. and Mrs. Townsend will be here until Monday when they will leave for Florida to spend the winter, as is their custom since giving up their house here.

Gaylord Deserts Actress At Home Town Opening

By Genevieve Reynolds

You'd think that when a lady lands a part in a play, her best love would stick around to applaud. But not Gaylord. He just ups and trots away on opening night. To make matters worse, it's in the actress' home town.

Yep, that's what happened to Natalie Hammond Core, featured player in Channing Pollock's melodrama, "Tangled Web," currently at the National Theater.

Blonde Natalie is mighty fond of Gaylord. Many times he's howled or barked approval of her stage bits here in the city. Remember when she played in "Ladies in Retirement"—Blackfriar production—a few seasons ago?

Gathers Dog Cortege

The miniature German Shepherd dog not only stuck by but gathered canines of all descriptions to thump their tails. So loud was the approval of the animals that audiences swore the whole thing, literally, had gone to the dogs.

Confessing that she was plenty nervous to play in Washington—her home town—Miss Core just couldn't understand why Gaylord should desert her. At first, she thought he had gone out to drum up rooters. When the final curtain fell and she returned backstage to find Gaylord still missing, she concluded that he was plain unfaithful.

Miss Core, descendant of the late John Hays Hammond, has starred in melodramas about town. She has played several seasons at the Roadside, Civic Theaters as well as the Willard Roof summer shows.

Was Radio Announcer

"It must have been a melodramatic moment when I was born," she comments. "I can't seem to get away from melodrama."

Tall, statuesque Natalie has radio experience—she was the first woman announcer on the Blue Network stations. However, she's beaming over her first part in a play that seems headed for Broadway. Her greatest ambition is to star in a play written by her mother with the stage set designed by her sister. "Mother was an actress," she explains, "now she's trying her hand at writing plays and my sister is an interior decorator."

In addition to her love for the theater, Mrs. Core likes sports, singing and dancing.

Hoosier Pays First Visit to Capital; Wined, Dined in Cosmopolitan Way

One of the advantages of living in Washington is that you can be cosmopolitan in food selection. This is one of the things that Miss Marilyn Vonderschmitt, society editor of the Washington Herald, Washington, Ind., especially likes about our Capital.

Marilyn came to Washington for the first time about one week ago, to be the guest of her publisher, Maj. Paul R. Bausman, Chemical Warfare Service, and Mrs. Bausman. She's been wined and dined and enjoyed being on the guest side of life rather than a reporter covering parties.

It has been quite an adventure for Marilyn to have the opportunity to eat at Chinese, Italian and Russian restaurants. Back in her Hoosier home town the eating places usually serve fried, baked and stewed chicken with dumplings or steaks. Yes they still have steaks available. And this visitor reports that you can still go into a grocery and buy a pound of butter, if you have the points. But she says that many persons buy margarine because of the high point value on butter.

Flavor's the Thing

Another new experience to Marilyn was when she learned that her hostess adds a commercial product to margarine to give it that butter flavor. This flavoring is not a new product for it has been used in some sections of the country for a long time. But it seems to be a newcomer to Washington. However, this flavoring I've learned is being used successfully by quite a few Washington cooks. One homemaker was kind enough to give me a bottle of it and I immediately put it to work.

When I inquired of Miss Vonderschmitt the dishes she especially liked, she named chicken muscovite she ate at a Russian restaurant, spaghetti with meat balls and its superb sauce, she enjoyed at an Italian restaurant, and egg rolls, fresh shrimps in lobster sauce, fried rice and Egg Foo Yong came in for special praise.

So that this Midwesterner can duplicate these Chinese dishes when she returns home, I secured for her the authentic Chinese recipes which follow:

FRESH SHRIMPS WITH LOBSTER SAUCE

Sear 1 cup ground fresh ham in greased large shallow pan. Add 1 cup rich chicken broth and 1 cup fresh green shrimps. Cover and cook on hot fire for three or four minutes, stirring occasionally to avoid burning. Add salt to taste, and 1 teaspoon bead molasses while still stirring. Add 1 teaspoon soy sauce, stir in 1 egg rapidly, thicken to sauce consistency with cornstarch. Serve hot. Complete cooking time—7 to 10 minutes.

FRIED RICE.

Mix well 2 cups steamed rice, ½ cup chopped meats (chicken or shellfish), ½ cup chopped vegetables (water chestnuts, bamboo shoots, mushrooms, scallions, pimientos), a little salt, pinch of sugar, ½ teaspoon bead molasses. Add a small amount cooking oil and pan fry over medium hot fire, stirring to avoid burning. Cooking time—5 to 7 minutes.

EGG FOO YONG

Beat four eggs and a little chicken stock together; add salt to taste; mix in vegetables (bamboo shoots, water-chestnuts, celery, scallions, pimientos) and one-half cup chopped cold meats, chicken or shellfish, and gently ladle into hot deep fat. Fry to texture desired. Serve dry or with brown sauce and rice.

The food served at social gatherings in Washington, Ind., this society reporter says, has become very simple. The clubs are devoting most of their time to Red Cross or knitting and sewing for the war agencies. However, one woman who gave a party was eager to have her menu printed. The food items were given but in reporting the dessert, the society editor omitted "with whipped cream." The woman called to ask why the reporter had not used the whipped cream.

THE COSMOPOLITAN FOODS served at Washington dining spots are a new adventure for Miss Maryilyn Vonderschmitt, society editor from Washington, Ind. It's also a pleasant change for her to take part in preparing for guests instead of writing about social affairs

The appeal last month of Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.) to civic organizations of the District to let the Senate District Committee know how they regard Commissioner Guy Mason has produced eight indorsements of his nomination for another term, it was announced yesterday by Edward P. Terry, committee secretary.

The committee expects to act on the nomination after Congress reconvenes November 14. Opposition has been threatened by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) and three other members of the committee who recommended Mason's immediate removal from office last October following an investigation of conditions at Gallinger Hospital.

Fairfax Board Denies Plea For Rezoning

1630 No. Buchanan St. Tel. CH. 3239.
Arlington-Fairfax Bureau, The Post.

An application to change the zoning classification on about two acres of land on Manassas rd. in Centerville District from agricultural to rural business, filed by Harry L. Johnson with the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors, has been denied on the recommendation of the county planning commission.

The board postponed action until November 1 on a second rezoning petition, filed by N. S. Hines, covering lots in the Birch subdivision of Falls Church. The delay was requested by Hines' atorney.

The county supervisors board also postponed from November 1 to November 15 the date for a public hearing on a proposed county ment of subdivisions in the county. ordinance regulating the establish-

Mrs. Edith Boyce of Burke was appointed a member of the County Citizens Postwar Employment Committee, succeeding Mrs. Douglas Hatch, who has moved from the couhty. Mrs. Boyce will represent Lee district on the committee.

Penn Daw Benefit

A benefit chicken dinner sponsored by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Penn Daw Volunteer Fire Department will be held from 5:30 to 8:30 p. m. tomorrow in the firehouse. Mrs. C. C. Laurence is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements. The organization will hold a dance during the second week in November on its first anniversary.

Talk on Referenda

The Fairfax County Voters League, in an effort to assist the voters to "know the facts" when they go to the polls on November 7, has invited W. Alvord Sherman, member of the Fairfax County School Board, and Mrs. Lee Park, chairman of voters information for the league, to present pros and cons of each of the two referenda questions Virginia will vote upon.

The luncheon meeting will be held today at 1 o'clock at the Village Inn, East Broad st., Falls Church. Flyers which define the two questions in the referenda expain the status of the present laws in each case and the amendments proposed, and give the arguments for and against the amendments, will be released.

Dairy Herd Leaders

Twenty-five herds, consisting of 934 cows, in Dairy Herd Improvement Association No. 1, were tested by H. R. Hawkins during September, it was announced yesterday. The owners of the five leading herds in milk production, and their average yields in pounds were:

F. E. Peck, 112.6; Linn Simpson, 1027.0; F. A. Melton, 924.7; G. M. James, 832.5, and Mason F. Smith, jr., 818.5.

Linn Simpson's herd led the five high herds in butterfat with 42.80 pounds average. The owners of the other four high herds and their averages were Mason F. Smith, jr., 39.73; F. A. Helton, 39.8T; F. E. Peck, 38.08, and G. M. James, 32.17.

Panel Tells Of Education In Fairfax

A panel discussion sponsored by the Fairfax Principals' Association, which provided a report from all organizations which have a direct duty to and influence on public schools, was held in the Chesterbrook elementary school.

The panel included school administration officials, representatives of the county governing body, Parent-Teacher Associations, Student Cooperative Associations, instructors in the field of religious education, social workers, civic associations and safety patrols.

County supervisors were meeting with the Arlington board and the Alexandria council on the regional tuberculosis sanitarium and therefore were not able to be present. Mrs. Josephine Carpenter, principal of the Chesterbrook school, welcomed the guests.

Mrs. R. A. Osborn, coordinator of parent-teacher activities for Fairfax, presided and introduced the speakers, who were Alex Haight, school board; Mrs. J. M. Howdershell, county principels; Miss Elma Besley, education association; Cecil Brown, county police, safety patrols; Miss Virginia Pucell, religious education; Dr. N. Nelson Podolnick of the health department; Dr. Robert A. Osborn of the Civic Federation, and John Driefer of the Student Cooperative Association. W. T. Woodson, Fairfax School superintendent, summarized the panel.

The building and grounds committee of the Chesterbrook Parent-Teacher Association made an "outstanding improvement" in the appearance of the building in preparation for the meeting and appreciation was expressed by the principal for their cooperation and efforts.

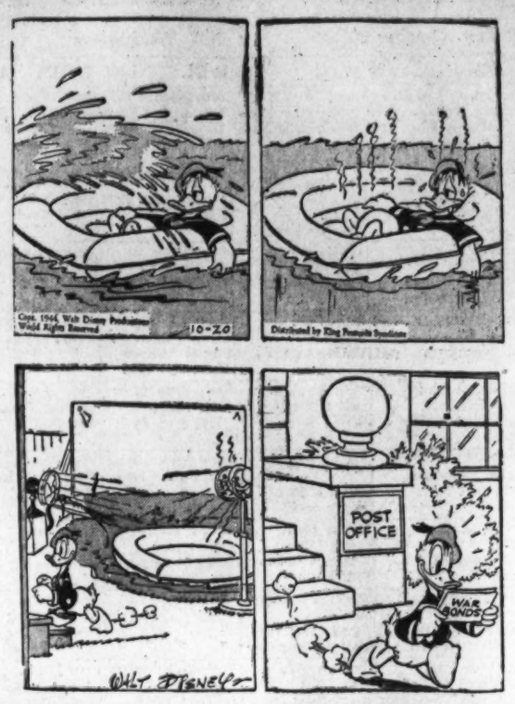

Refreshments were served by the hospitality committee of the PTA, consisting of Mrs. Thomas J. Harrington, Mrs. Edward Beetham, Mrs. W. R. Deininger and Mrs. Albert Lueders, president.

Teen-Agers Give Benefit for Alexandria Home, War Fund

The Alexandria Teen Age Club yesterday became the first organization in the city to hold a benefit event for the Alexandria Home and War Fund drive. A total of $70.52 was raised at the club's dance last weekend in the George Washington High School.

One of the largest contributions to the Home and War Fund from an organization's treasury was reported by J. Fred Kirchner, president of the Alexandria Central Labor Union and State labor inspector for northern Virginia, who said that in addition to individual contributions from workers, the CLU is donating $150.

Now being conducted on an extension of time following the previously announced closing date of October 12, the Alexandria Home and War Fund has reached $58,011 while the quota is $118,701.33 to meet the budget requirements of 12 Alexandria agencies and 22 groups in the National War Fund, including the United Service Organizations.

The general chairman of the drive, John R. Schafe, has scheduled another report meeting for campaign workers this evening at the USO Drop In Center, 115 North Washington st., beginning at 8 o'clock.

Later School Opening Set

Luray, Va., Oct. 19. — Page County schools will open at 10 a. m. beginning Monday instead of 9, according to an order of the School Board. They will close at 4:30. The change was made to accommodate children who have to leave home now before daylight.

TWA IS READY NOW

In accordance with an application for an around-the-world air route filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board on June 10, 1944, TWA is ready to start regular, frequent, low-cost transatlantic service by January 1, or shortly thereafter.

TWA has the planes

Five Boeing Stratoliners, the only 4-engine transports in domestic service before the war, have been returned to TWA by the Army. In 2½ years of wartime flying, these famous planes with TWA crews have carried presidents, prime ministers, kings, ambassadors, generals, admirals and other important passengers and cargo.

These same Stratoliners are being completely modernized at a cost of nearly $400,000 per plane — new Flying Fortress wings, tail surfaces, engines, landing gear, and all of the latest improvements possible.

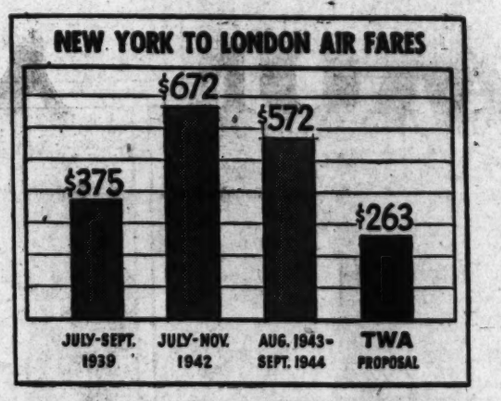

TWA has the pattern of schedule frequency

Seven round trips a week direct from the United States to London, two round trips a week from London to Cairo, and one round trip a week from Cairo to Calcutta — with over twice as many flights to the British Isles as are now available to travelers and shippers.

TWA offers new low rates

TWA's proposed rate using Stratoliners is $263.80 direct from New York to London as compared with the present minimum air rate of $572.00. (The prewar first-class steamship rate was $316.00.) TWA's proposed fare from New York to Paris — $277.00; to Cairo — $428.70; to Calcutta — $699.40.

Furthermore, with the release of Constellations now in production for the Army, TWA will be prepared to offer even more frequent schedules, faster service, and lower rates to travelers and shippers.

Thus, TWA is ready with the planes, the frequent service, the low fares and with an organization having over 21 million miles of "trans-world" flying experience — ready to start operations as soon as we get the go-ahead.
